U.S. Warships Sent to Aid Citizens in Spain

Letter to Council Drafted by C. I. O.

Power to 'Dismember' Federation Attacked by 12 Leaders.

By Sidney Olson.

The Committee for Industrial Organization, the band of 12 insurgent unions headed by John L. Lewis, last night denied the power of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor to try them on charges of dual unionism.

The letter, drafted by the shaggy-maned and militant Lewis at a meeting of the C. I. O. yesterday amounted to notice that the 12 rebel unions would not appear on August 3 to stand trial by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and the executive council.

It further threatened to carry the fight directly over the decision of the council to the floor of the American Federation of Labor convention this fall. The letter, addressed to Green, and signed by Lewis, said:

"The council, which incidentally has notoriously prejudged the issue, is without authority to dismember the federation. The C. I. O. declines to submit to its jurisdiction."

"No A. F. of L. Quarrel."

Lewis made plain that his quarrel is not with the American Federation of Labor, but with its crafts-union-dominated executive council. The message closed with this strongly-worded reminder to the A. F. of L. chieftains:

"Leaders of organized labor have an obligation that ought to outweigh their personal ambitions, and may even call for some sacrifice of real or fancied advantages enjoyed by crafts they represent.

"That obligation is to organize the unorganized for the common benefit of all who toil whether craftsman or unskilled.

"The problems of social justice and economic security pressing upon us justify organized labor in widening its influence that its voice may be more clearly heard in the councils of the Nation. In the fair and just solution of those problems rests the welfare of all our working millions and the heritage they shall leave their children."

Lewis blasted the executive council specifically throughout the letter, chiefly on two angles: their lack of action in organizing mass-production industrial workers, such as in steel, automobiles and rubber factories, and their insistence on the principle of the craft-unionism to the exclusion of all else.

"Place for Both."

He said:

"The C. I. O. has not opposed the craft unions, or their development, except in mass-production industries where their jurisdictional claims are at best theoretical, and have never been and cannot be realized. There is a place for both forms of trade unions in a progressive and militant labor movement."

In this fashion Lewis strove to drive a wedge between the executive council and the membership of the federation. The letter stated:

"The vague charges of dual unionism, rebellion and fomenting insurrection, are wholly based on the work of the C. I. O. in organizing the labor of certain mass-production industries into industrial unions.

"The heads of certain craft

Latter Believes 28-Year-Old Employe 'Will Talk Tomorrow;' Two More Held for Quizzing; Victim, 18, Is Buried in Ohio.

By the Associated Press.

Asheville, N. C., July 21.—The key to the baffling Clevenger murder mystery lies with Daniel Gaddy, 28-year-old watchman at the fashionable hotel where the young co-ed was slain, Sheriff Laurence E. Brown said tonight.

The sheriff made this announcement after he had questioned Gaddy and three of the other four persons held, two more hotel employes taken into custody last night, and Mark Wollner, 35-year-old concert violinist.

"I questioned Gaddy quite a while today," the sheriff said. "I think he will talk tomorrow."

The latest persons detained for questioning in the slaying of 18-year-old Helen Clevenger, New York University student, were Edward Fleming, bellboy, and L. D. Roddy, elevator operator. Both are colored.

Changes Story Slightly.

The sheriff grilled Wollner tonight for the first time since he was taken into custody Saturday night and made a statement that he was at home the night of the crime.

The violinist, sheriff Brown said, changed his story slightly tonight, but still clung to his claim that he was at home from 9:30 p. m. Wednesday until 8 a. m. Thursday.

That was as far as the officer would comment on his questioning of the musician whose studio is across the street from the hotel at which the girl was slain.

The sheriff said an investigation had disclosed there were 12 "supermaster keys" to the hotel rooms in existence, whereas hotel records showed there were but 11. Yesterday he described the key found in the lock of Miss Clevenger's room as the "most significant clew."

The only one of the five persons now held incommunicado who was not grilled today was Mildred Ward, 19, who gave Wollner an alibi.

The girl, a tubercular patient, was taken into custody Sunday night after the sheriff said he had found witnesses who disputed her and Wollner's statements that the violinist was at home the night of the crime. Miss Ward is the daughter of Wollner's landlady.

The sheriff said he counted on two keys to unlock the six-day mystery of the girl's death in her hotel room.

One Is Master Key.

One, he said, is a master pass key, apparently used by the killer-ravisher, found outside the door to the vacationing girl's room.

The other, he said, fits the watchman's time clock, and hangs from a brass chain in the corridor of the hotel not more than 20 feet from the room in which Miss Clevenger was slain.

Gaddy, the sheriff said, neglected to use the key to punch the time clock he wears around his neck

Al Smith Plans To Aid Landon, Says Hamilton

By Franklyn Waltman.

A Staff Correspondent.

Chicago, July 21.—National Republican Chairman John Hamilton today indicated rather pointedly that Al Smith, Democratic Presidential nominee in 1924, would appeal to the country for the defeat of President Roosevelt, and the election of his Republican opponent, Gov. Alf M. Landon.

Hamilton made this statement on arrival here at the end of a tour of Eastern States in an explanation of a meeting he had yesterday in New York with Democracy's "Happy Warrior." He carefully refrained from specifically committing Smith in any way, but clearly indicated where the former New York Governor's active sympathy would be in this campaign.

Predicts Majority.

Aside from describing his meeting with Smith, Hamilton had little that was new to report. He said he received surprisingly enthusiastic ovations and receptions throughout the New England States, which he added, are safely Landon States. He cited similar manifestations of Republican sentiment in New York and Pennsylvania.

Adhering to his original claim that Gov. Landon would carry at least 42 States, Hamilton predicted a majority of 750,000 or better in upper New York States for the Republican nominee and a majority in the State as a whole of at least 500,000. Consequently he apparent-

'Skill' Issue Halts Injunction Ruling On Pin Machines

Sharp disagreement over which types of pin ball machines were of the gaming or skill type yesterday tied up indefinitely the issuance of an injunction prohibiting the Police Department from confiscating machines.

Attorney Jeff Lichtenberg, representing a corporation owning 2,500 of the machines, and John J. Wilson, Assistant United States Attorney, representing the Government in the crusade to drive the pin machines out of the District, differed greatly on the terms of the formal order that will carry out the oral edict of Justice Oscar R. Luhring which, in effect, gave the machines a new lease on life at least until a fuller and more complete hearing in October.

Justice Luhring held that in the short sessions of the summer term of the District Court he could not take sufficient evidence for a ruling. Therefore, he said, he would grant an injunction prohibiting police from seizing the machines until the court has further gone into the matter in an extended hearing in the fall term.

Dr. Townsend Seized in Chase After Walk-Out

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, July 21.—Dr. Francis E. Townsend staged another "walk-out" today, but in an auto chase a deputy sheriff brought him back to resume a deposition hearing about the Townsend old-age pension organization.

The pension leader walked out of a hearing being conducted by Benjamin F. Sacharow, attorney. It was a scene reminiscent of the day he abruptly left a hearing by a Congressional committee investigating the Townsend movement.

"It's none of your business," Dr. Townsend replied to one of Sacharow's questions. He picked up his notes and abruptly departed.

Gets Contempt Citation.

Dr. Townsend immediately announced he was leaving for Erie, Pa., to keep a speaking engagement. Sacharow obtained a citation for contempt of court from a notary public.

Deputy Sheriff Joe Podseday armed himself with a body attachment. Sacharow and the deputy, accompanied by Sacharow's brother, set out from the hotel in a taxicab, following Dr. Townsend's limousine.

They sped through side streets and in east Cleveland headed off Dr. Townsend's car on a main route. With Dr. Townsend were his wife and Harry Maines.

"We had to use plenty of speed to head off Townsend's high powered limousine," said Sacharow. He charged Townsend was in flight.

"Not Displeased."

The deputy escorted Dr. Townsend to common pleas court. There, the doctor said: "I am not at all displeased. It will probably result in 5,000 more clubs being organized the country over. It is all very high-handed, but since it is to my advantage, why should I care?"

Sacharow recited his story to Judge Samuel E. Kramer. He had been conducting the hearing in connection with a suit Dr. Alfred J. Wright, recently removed as a regional Townsend leader. The suit asked that Dr. Townsend and trustees of Old-Age Revolving Pensions, Limited, be ousted, and that the court require an accounting of more than $1,000,000 in organization funds. Sacharow is counsel for Wright.

Lawrence Tucker, Townsend counsel, told the judge the deposition hearing had "degenerated into

40,000 Cheer Charging Troops In Restaging of Manassas Battle

Rebel Yells Rend Air as Muskets Rattle, Cannon Boom and History Is Turned Back to Defeat of Federals in 1861.

The Battle of Manassas in Pictures—Page 14.

By Edward T. Folliard,

A Staff Correspondent.

Manassas, Va., July 21.—This was a dismal day for the North in 1861. The first great battle of the War Between the States was over, and the Yankees had been whipped. Worse, many of them had fled the field in panic.

The cry "On to Richmond" at first seemed a mockery, as Beauregard, the victorious Confederate leader, turned covetous eyes on Washington. Poor Abe Lincoln! This day, as Walt Whitman wrote, was bitterer than gall—a crucifixion day."

The bloody engagement—known in the South as the First Battle of Manassas and in the North as the Battle of Bull Run—was fought all over again today on this seventy-fifth anniversary, but with blanks instead of bullets.

Freeman Narrates Events.

A gallery of 40,000 persons, many of them from Washington, looked on as the actors in the sham battle—Marines from Quantico, Army men from Fort Myer and Washington and an R. O. T. C. outfit—surged back and forth across the Henry House plateau, charging and counter-charging, while muskets rattled, cannon boomed and trumpet calls knifed the air.

Over there on the left was where Col. Thomas J. Jackson had stood, and where he got his eloquent nom de guerre. Not long out of a professor's chair at the Virginia Military Institute, Col. (later general) Jackson was not to be stampeded.

Retreating before a murderous Federal fire, the Confederate forces of Bee, Bartow and Evans had swarmed over the edge of the plateau. Jackson and his Virginians wouldn't budge.

"There is Jackson standing like a stonewall," cried Gen. Bee, "Rally around the Virginians."

Stage Little Changed.

Dr. Douglas Southall Freeman, famous Richmond editor, the man who wrote the biography to end all biographies of Robert E. Lee, narrated this and other immortal incidents of the battle, as the "Confederates" and the "Federals" strove for mastery of the field today.

His eloquence and the realism of the fighting men out on the plateau carried the Virginians in the crowd away—carried them back to that hot July day in '61.

A wild rebel yell arose from the grandstand as Jackson's men, bayonets out, rushed down on the Federals in the last successful charge, and J. E. B. Stuart's cavalry tore out of the woods to hasten their flight to Washington.

The stage of the battle has not changed much in 75 years. Bull Run, no bigger than our own Rock Creek, winds snake-like through the meadows three miles away from

Drought Placed Among Worst In U. S. Records

As Severe as Record-Breaking One of 1934, Bureau Survey Reveals.

The 1936 drought moved officially yesterday into the blacklist of the greatest droughts of all time, when the latest survey by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics showed that in mid-July the drought was "as severe as that of 1934 at the same date, and much more serious than any previous droughts since the country was settled."

Using the pasture acreage of the country as the best possible index of the effect of the drought and heat on plant growth, the bureau's figures showed:

On July 15 condition of pastures was 44.7 per cent of normal, compared with 48.9 per cent July 1, 1934, and 39.6 per cent August 1 of that year.

Seriousness Shown.

In no other year in the Nation's history has the figure ever fallen below 56 per cent of normal, except 1934 and 1936.

Only in the near-drought years of 1883, 1894, 1911, 1930, 1931 and 1933 has the pasture acreage ever been below 69 per cent on either date, except for 1934 and 1936.

In the past 25 years the condition reported has averaged 81.8 per cent normal on July 1 and 75.8 per cent on August 1.

This series of figures showed statistically for the first time this year the extent and seriousness of the situation, for some of the season's hottest weather has come since July

Turkish Warships Enter Dardanelles

Istanbul, Turkey, July 21 (AP).—A Turkish battleship and four submarines completed reoccupation tonight of the Dardanelles, demilitarized 13 years ago by the Lausanne Treaty.

The battleship Yavuz, with the quartet of undersea craft moving beside her, occupied a strategic position o the Islands of Embros and Tenedos.

On the banks of the Bosphorus and the Dardanelles, detatchments of infantry and cavalry marched in patrol formation, their occupation approved by an international conference at Montreux, Switzerland.

New Turkish guns were installed in old fortresses, barren of armament since the Allied Powers forced removal of war equipment from the straits in 1923.

The new convention of Montreux granted a Turkish demand for remilitarization of the straits—officially constituted as the Dardanelles, the Sea of Marmora and the Bosphorus.

Wreckage Washed Up on Coast of Florida Spurs Search by Air and Sea for Motorship

By the Associated Press.

Tampa, Fla., July 21.—Burned wreckage washed in by the tide and an oil drum floating near the Dry Tortugas provided possible clews today in the search for the British motorship Nunoca, missing with 22 persons aboard. Coast guardsmen hunting the craft said the discoveries pointed to the possibility of an explosion aboard the ship.

A boat hatch was washed up on the beach 30 miles south of Tampa and a frame from a ship's window was found near Miami, while the crew of the schooner Angrera came into port from Honduras with an account of sighting some drums July 13.

For the last four days Coast Guard ships and planes have scanned the waters of the Gulf of Mexico off the Florida west coast and the Florida Straits without a trace of the Nunoca. Three Cuban naval ships likewise made a fruitless search around the western and southern ends of the island republic.

The Nunoca carried no radio, but Coast Guard officials said they felt sure Capt. Moses I. Kirkconnell would have gotten word out somehow if he had made land, even in an isolated spot.

The trim, 110-foot passenger-carrying ship should have reached here July 9 with its nine Americans, four Britons and a crew of eight under Capt. Kirkconnell. It was provisioned for not more than five days, but emergency rations would have provided food and water for several days.

Acting on orders from Washington, the Jacksonville headquarters office of the Coast Guard ordered all available service craft into the area covered by the Nunoca's normal route.

Situation Grave, Vessels Are Sped To Revolt Scene

Invaders Defeated in Barcelona, State Aids Assert; Refugee Officials Report 5 Provinces Held by Rebels.

The United States yesterday ordered two warships to revolt-torn Spain to evacuate American citizens, if necessary.

At Madrid the government massed its forces to defend the capital against rebel troops reported advancing under leadership of Gen. Emilio Mola. Mola's army yesterday captured the towns of Navarre and San Sebastian and was believed in full control of five northern provinces.

The government sent five armies into the field to take the offensive in rebel-dominated territory, as civil war raged unabated. The Loyalists claimed victory in Barcelona after heavy fighting, casualties being estimated at 500 dead and 3,000 wounded.

La Linea, near Gibraltar, was reported in flames last night. Loyalist planes from Gibraltar bombed Ceuta.

It was reported rebels remained masters in southern Spain, although the government announced the capture of Toledo and said victory was near at Seville.

Madrid Fortified.

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.

Madrid, July 21.—The Spanish government, massing armed columns of workers and peasants in defense of the capital, claimed success in important provincial cities tonight against rebel forces.

Government accounts said Barcelona, important northeastern port, was in the hands of loyal forces. Unofficial estimates placed the number of dead in fighting there at 500, with 3,000 wouned.

The total death toll for the revolt was set at more than 900, with 300 lives lost in the fighting in the capital.

Gen. Relquelme, heading a column which marched on Toledo, reported the rebellion there was crushed. The government said the position of revolters in Seville and all Andalusia was weakening steadily.

Unconfirmed reports stated Seville itself had surrendered to the loyal troops, but government advices said it had not yet capitulated.

Rebels in Vera.

(Dispatches from Vera, in northern Spain, asserted the rebel troops were reported to have occupied most of the northern part of the country.)

(Two Leftist deputies reaching Hendaye, France, said at least five northern provinces were in the hands of the revolters.)

(A Reuters news agency dispatch from Rabat, Morocco, said it was reported there a mechanized column of rebels under Gen. Molas was advancing on Madrid and that Gen. Queipo de Llano's insurgents still held Seville.)

As five civilian battalions were dispatched into the provinces to assist loyal garrisons, the government ordered all stores and businesses in Madrid to open tomorrow. The city was comparatively quiet, although there were outbreaks of firing.

Loyal naval forces were under-

Warships on Way.

By Felix Bruner.

The battleship Oklahoma and the cruiser Quincy were ordered to Spain late yesterday to evacuate, if necessary, American citizens from that revolution-torn country.

Although no Americans were reported in immediate danger, dispatches from Ambassador Claude G. Bowers and consular officers in Spain indicated the situation was sufficiently serious to warrant this unusual measure.

The Oklahoma is now off Cherbourg, France, on a training cruise with midshipmen from Annapolis. The Quincy, newest of the Navy's heavy cruisers, is two days out in the Atlantic on a "shake-down" cruise.

The State Department's announcement of the move, which was the first of its kind since the Japanese invasion of Shanghai, said:

"All reports from the embassy and from consular officers in Spain indicate that American citizens in that country are safe.

Precautionary Measure.

"As a precautionary measure, however, the U. S. S. Oklahoma now with the training squadron at Cherbourg, France, has been ordered to the northern coast of Spain with instructions to put herself in communication with Ambassador Bowers at San Sebastian and with consuls at Vigo and Balboa and to evacuate Americans should it be necessary.

"For like reasons the U. S. S. Quincy, now en route to Europe, has been directed to pdoceed to Gibraltar and await orders."

It was the first time since the World War that American warships have been dispatched to European waters on such a mission.

Death Toll Increasing.

The latest official report concerning conditions in Spain was sent by Consul William W. Corcoran through the American Embassy in London. It declared the death toll is increasing hourly and that the city of Vigo, where he is stationed, was incommunicado.

'Murder' Search Finally Winds Up At Medical School

Police and a small army of reporters put in a prety gruesome morning yesterday on what looked like a first-class murder mystery, and all because of Leonard Sommerville, who was cleaning things up.

Robert Martin, of the 700 block of Hobart street northwest, started things by telling police about seeing parts of a human body in an Animal Rescue League truck parked at Seventh and O streets northwest. That was last Saturday, he said, but the spectacle so frightened him that he didn't want to say anything about it right away.

Then Chief of Detectives Bernard Thompson received a telegram that said the arms, legs and head of a man had been found in a garbage train at the District disposal plant at Cherry Hill, Va. Thompson snapped into action. Four crack members of the homicide squad were shot to Cherry Hill in a fast car. Reporters and photographers followed.

Meanwhile Detective Sergt. Jerry Flaherty, of the homicide squad, was checking up on Martin's story. He traced the dismembered corpus delicti to a can taken from the George Washington Medical School Saturday.

Landon Makes Minor Changes In His Address

G. O. P. Candidate's Wife Amazed at Topeka's Festive Spirit.

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans., July 21.—Blocks away from decorated and holiday-spirited downtown Topeka, Gov. Alf M. Landon spent most of today in his Executive Mansion, enjoying his family's homecoming and a few welcome hours of rest before Thursday's notification ceremonies.

The address in which he will accept the Republican Party's formal notice of his nominatoin for the Presidency was completed yesterday.

But after a night's sleep, Landon once again went over its 3,500 words, making perhaps a minute change here and there.

After this last check-over, a close adviser said that in addition to probable emphasis on farm relief, unemployment, Federal spending and taxation, and the Constitution, the Republican nominee was likely to touch on labor problems, outlining his views on what the Government's attitude should be toward the labor movement.

Family Returns Home.

Mrs. Landon arrived before 7 o'clock from the Governor's summer ranch at Estes Park, Colo., and drove directly to the Executive Mansion. She saw fluttering across broad Kansas avenue, which threads Topeka's business section, a myriad of banners and flags. Golden sunflowers filittered on blue backgrounds; a "Welcome G. O. P." framed the familiar elephant on hundreds of banners; Landon's picture was everywhere, and streets and business houses alike were dressed in red, white and blue bunting.

"Why, it is almost unbelievable," Mrs. Landon said, apparently amazed at preparations for the notification, expected to bring upward of 50,000 visitors.

With Mrs. Landon came Mrs. S. E. Cobb, her mother, 19-year-old Peggy Anne Landon, the Governor's daughter, and John Landon, his father.

Landon came to his office during the afternoon to hold his customary press conference. It was larger than in recent weeks with probably 50 newsmen attending.

Haircut Only News.

A haircut was all the Governor said he could report. The morning, he added, was passed at home visiting with his family.

Brought out by questions:

Landon did not care to comment on the statement by Representative John B. Hollister (Republican), Ohio, that they had discussed "the matter of a nonpartisan commission of experts on banking to begin as soon as possible a basic study of all our Federal banking laws with a view to their simplification and improvement."

He talked with John D. M. Hamilton, the Republican National chairman, on the telephone today, but the Eastern political situation and possible campaign activities of Alfred E. Smith, anti-Roosevelt Democrat, were not discussed. Hamilton is scheduled to reach Topeka Thursday morning.

Landon's campaign itinerary will be made up soon; that may mean several days or a couple of weeks.

Representative Bertrand H. Snell, New York, permanent chairman of the Cleveland convention, who will notify Landon of his nomination, was expected tomorrow.

Drought

15, and further damage has followed in wide areas.

The bureau said that while pastures had improved in parts of the South with rains, the pastures in most of the corn belt were brown on July 15, and the dried grass was being consumed rapidly by livestock.

Even as the crop report came out, warmer weather moved back in the Midwest after its brief rout by rainfall and cloudy skies. The three-week deadline set by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace has expired. This critical period was to tell whether the drought would be as severe as that of 1934.

Corn prices immediately followed the thermometer upward in the corn belt according to the Associated Press, with the Chicago market's corn price zooming up to the full 4-cent limit, July closing at 91⅝ cents. Gloomy dispatches from Iowa had followed optimistic ones of the day before, and it was said corn prospects had been reduced by 50 per cent in the past two weeks of excessive heat.

Toll at Nearly 4,600.

Deaths from the heat wave, while mounting more slowly than in the full flush of the severest impact in the Midwest, climbed to 4,600 as 12 died in Oklahoma and several more in Nebraska, where the heat centered yesterday. Texas, also suffering from 100-degree temperatures, was whipped by the worst thunder storm in many years.

Damage was counted into hundreds of thousands of dollars as a 65-mile-an-hour wind struck the central northwest part of the State, with losses in Dallas alone set at more than $200,000. In Tishomingo, Okla., a heavy downpour brought 4.21 inches in three hours.

Concern in the much-cooler Midwest turned to the Mississippi River, as the Father of Waters sank all along its course to near-record low levels. Engineers at Rock Island, Ill., announced a plan to release reserve waters from some Minnesota lakes to keep the river open for navigation, as the level fell to two-tenths of a foot above low water.

Down to 1934 Low.

The Crop Reporting Board's estimate, compiled for the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, said in more detailed discussion of the drought:

"By July 20 the condition was pr[illegible] down almost to the all-[illegible] set August 1, 1934. [illegible] the drought [illegible]sent [illegible]d [illegible]h [illegible]

Public Takes No Stock in Victory Predictions of Rival Managers in Presidential Campaign.

By Franklyn Waltman

FEW persons give any serious attention or consideration to the predictions of victory which appear every other day or so in the newspapers that are coming from the various campaign managers of the political parties, chiefly because such predictions obviously are exaggerations.

WALTMAN.

One day it is Democratic ChairmanJames A. Farley who is quoted as asserting that President Roosevelt will carry all 48 States this year. The next day it is Republican Chairman John Hamilton who is portrayed as laughing the Farley claim to scorn and solemnly pronouncing that Gov. Alf M. Landon will sweep at least 42 States. Then Mr. Farley hee-haws. And when these two major figures are not making their counter-claims, the managers of the congressional campaign committees are.

Of course, the average reader believes none of it. Even the party workers are suspicious of such statements, as any newspaperman can testify who has had the experience of ward, city and State leaders button-holing him to ask what the national chairmen really believe. These readers may put their faith in straw votes and nonpartisan polls, and accordingly bet their money—but they do not believe the official claims.

The question therefore naturally arises why these campaign managers persist in uttering claims—and usually preposterous claims, at that—when few believe them or take them seriously, and the claimants look ridiculous. The chief reason is that newspaper correspondents seem to take a fiendist delight in asking the campaign managers what they think of the outcome months in advance of the election.

Once the question is asked the damage is done and the campaign manager is put in a serious hole. It is virtually impossible for him to be an honest fellow and tell the truth—which most probable is that he does not know, but that he is hoping for the best. Such a reply immediately would be interpreted as an indication of weakness and of hopelessness, if not of unfaithfulness to the candidate.

The campaign manager feels he must make a numerical claim—indeed the reporters will pursue him if he does not. But the psychological factor in politics is so important that he cannot make any claim without claiming everything. He seldom believes the claim he is making. Of course, a few campaign managers do. They get a lopsided impression of the situation because they only meet the people who think as they do. But such unrealistic, impressionable fellows seldom rise to be national campaign managers.

I am certain that Jim Farley does not really believe President Roosevelt will carry every State this fall. Indeed, I am certain that Jim Farley knows already that the President will lose a certain number of States. But he cannot publicly say so.

Suppose that Jim Farley one day should announce that he is certain the President would carry 36 States this fall. Immediately the reporters would want him to identify the 12 States he conceded and if he did not, they would proceed anyway, to speculate on their identity.

Before 24 hours would have passed, there would descend on the bald Farley head the wrath of Democratic leaders in each of the 12 States where he admitted the President had no chance. How, these leaders would demand to know, could they keep their organizatoins together, improve morale and instill a fighting spirit into their followers when the national chairman blithely announces they are engaged in a futile task.

This is not fanciful dreaming It has happened to some campaign managers who have tried to be honest. Of course, Mr. Hamilton claims only 42 States for Gov. Landon, conceding six to President Roosevelt. But the six he concedes are Southern States in which it is a hearsay worthy of burning at the stake for a white man to vote for anyone except a Democrat.

Indeed, prior to 1928, there were 11 such States. Mr. Hamilton now includes five of them in his claim because some of the Republicans in those States, ever optimistic, believe they have a chance again this year—and he does not wish to discourage them.

The same situation exists in respect to the claims of the Congressional campaign committees. Some days ago Chairman Chester C. Bolton, of the Republican Congressional Committee, asserted that his party hoped to capture 40 or 50 House seats now held by Democrats. It probably was a truthful reflection of the way he saw the situation at present. But when it is analyzed it was a damaging statement to the Republican cause. In effect, Mr. Bolton was throwing the towel in the ring, because to get control of the House the Republicans must capture 114 seats now held by Democrats.

Evidently, Mr. Bolton learned in recent days that conservative, sensible claims cannot be made by him. He must exaggerate, irrespective of whether he knows whereof he speaks, for yesterday in Chicago he rather lamely explained away that statement by asserting he had not made himself clear.

What he meant to say, he explained, was that the Republicans had 50 Democratic seats already in the bag and are capturing additional ones almost daily—indeed, said he, "prospects for Republicans regaining control of the House are increasing daily." Yet two-thirds of the States' nominations have not been made.

Thus the campaign manager is in the unhappy position either of being forced to make exaggerated, ridiculous statements or of being accused of spreading defeatist propaganda against his party. He cannot even get away with saying nothing.

Smith to Aid Landon

ly looks for a Democratic majority of not more than 250,000 in New York City. Tammany normally carries New York City for the Democrats by a majority of 500,000 or more.

But even if the Republican chairman has exaggerated somewhat the up-State Republican margin in New York and minimized the Democratic strength in New York City, the Republican claim to the State seems to be well founded, chiefly because of reports of the rapid recuperation of the Republicans in the northern counties, traditionally their strongholds.

Hamilton, who held a series of conferences here with party leaders and workers during a two-day stopover while on his way to the notification ceremonies at Topeka, said he would start on a swing of Western States on August 3 and expected to travel about 6,800 miles by airplane. His tour of the country is designed to revitalize the Republican State organizations.

Claiming that the third party movement would take more votes from the Democrats than the Republicans, Hamilton pointed out that in a recent registration in Boston, out of 817 voters who changed their affiliations to join the new party, 682 were Democrats and 135 Republicans.

Hamilton said he spent "a very pleasant" hour and a half with Al Smith talking over the national political situation and discussing what the latter's attitude would be. He said he was "very satisfied" with the conference, but did not feel that he should speak for Smith.

"I am satisfied that Gov. Smith, through some medium or other will make known to the country his views," Hamilton said. "He will choose the auspices under which he speaks and the place of his speech. I hope to have another talk with Gov. Smith but we made no arrangements for such a meeting."

The Hamilton statement was construed to mean that in all probability Smith would not speak under Republican auspices when he reveals his course of action to the country and that he may not indorse Gov. Landon by name but that he will leave no doubt of his determined hostility to the New Deal and his desire for the defeat of President Roosevelt.

Later in the day Representative Chester C. Bolton, chairman of the Republican congressional campaign committee, also held a press conference, marking the opening of Western headquarters here, with Carl G. Bachmann in charge. Bachmann, campaign manager for Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, in the pre-convention fight, said he was enthusiastically supporting the Landon candidacy and the entire Republican ticket. He declined to state what the Idahoan would do in the campaign, except to point out that Senator Borah already has pledged loyalty to the party.

Incidentally, when quizzed about charges made during the pre-convention fight that large sums of money had been spent in behalf of Borah, Bachmann asserted that he handled all funds, that $8,040 had been collected and that when all bills were paid there was an $8 surplus.

Bolton in a formal statement asserted that "prospects for Republicans regaining control of the House are increasing daily."

McNutt Asserts 'Sinister' Group Backs Landon

Indiana Governor Charges Efforts to Wreck Gains Under Roosevelt.

By the Associated Press.

Indianapolis, July 21.—Gov. Paul V. McNutt of Indiana tonight pictured a brother Governor—Alf M. Landon of Kansas, Republican Presidential nominee—as "an individual particularly susceptible to the influences of stronger minds and more ruthless wills.

Acting for the Democratic National Committee, Gov. McNutt delivered one of the first radio addresses planned by the party leaders. It was broadcast from coast to coast.

Attacking what he termed "the sinister forces at work to hamper and destroy the accomplishments of President Roosevelt's Administration in behalf of the whole people," Gov. McNutt said: "It is important also to know the concealed motives actuating the ill-omened elements of our society who are principal sponsors for the opposition's candidate for President."

Country Knows Roosevelt.

"The country knows Franklin D. Roosevelt," Gov. McNutt said. "He has proven himself during many years of public service. I need not repeat to you his qualifications, dwell on his qualities of judgment, his devotion to duty, his courage and his willingness to face the problems of administration calmly.

"Now let us turn to the other side: "The country might possibly be willing to accept the picture of the Republican nominee for President as offered by his managers and spokesmen. That is, they might be willing to believe that he is the honest, plain, home-spun character of negative virtues, pretending no great acquaintanceship with the involved national and international problems that appertain to the high office to which he aspires, but making up for his lack of such experience by a wealth of homely common sense and high motives.

"Unfortunately for his hopes, the quality of those who are making his fight intervenes between the simple, kindly figure on the screen and those who are asked to elevate him to the highest office in the land.

Calls Him Susceptible.

"Indeed, the very personality ascribed to him inevitably suggests an individual particularly susceptible to the influences of stronger minds and more ruthless wills.

"Just who are the people to whom he is willing to be obligated in the unlikely event of his election? Can they be other than the group of which the DuPont Liberty League is characteristic, and William Randolph Hearst, whose first visit to and indorsement of Gov. Landon has been justly described as the kiss of death?"

Attributing Landon's nomination to the support given by the Hearst newspapers, Gov. McNutt said there can be no doubt that this support has been entered up as debits against Landon "for which the bill would be rendered if the Governor ever attained the position in which he could discharge the obligations."

Gov. McNutt said he "supposed it is too much to hope that Gov. Landon will improve the opportunity afforded by his speech of acceptance, soon to be delivered, by disclaiming responsibility for this poisonous support."

Central Chinese Start Recovery

Shanghai, July 21 (AP).—The central Chinese government, successful in halting a domestic rebellion arising in the southwest, tonight began to repair economic fences in Canton.

The Nanking administration placed control of the southern financial program in the hands of T. L. Soong, brother of T. V. Soong, president of the Bank of China and former minister of finance.

Bearing the official title of finance commissioner of Kwangtung Province, Soong was charged with stabilizing the Canton financial markets and bringing the southern economic operations inside the national framework established in Nanking.

Soong's appointment, observers believed, was approved because of recurring fluctuations in the southern money market accompanied by increasing living costs.

Festival Half-Season Program Announced

The first half of the summer festival season ended last night at Sylvan Theater and no sooner had the final curtain been dropped than Community Center Officials and the Office of National Capital Parks announced the program for the second half of the season.

The second half of the season will open on July 28 with a Shakesperian Festival by the Washington Players, followed by a dance program August 4, a Pan-American festival August 11; presentation of Shakespeares 'Midsummer Night's Dream," August 18, and the opera "Martha" on August 25.

Dr. Townsend Arrested

a series of speeches by Sacharow." He called it a "fishing expedition," and said he accepted responsibility for "what occurred."

Judge Kramer obtained an agreement of counsel to resume the hearing with the jurist in charge.

Then Dr. Townsend's counsel explained that his 70-year-old client had had no lunch. The pension leader stepped into the judge's chamber for a piece of apple pie and a bottle of milk.

Questioning then was resumed by Sacharow for more than an hour. When court was adjourned for the day, it was agreed to resume on August 17, giving Townsend time for his New England speaking tour. It was stipulated by the court that a common pleas judge would preside.

Sacharow did not press the citation for contempt.

At the morning session conducted by Sacharow, Dr. Townsend several times refused to answer questions, on advice of counsel.

Leading up to the doctor's departure was Sacharow's question whether Townsend had told Wright in Baltimore that Townsend could get a 15 per cent commission on medical tablets advertised in the Townsend weekly, merely by indorsing them.

Sacharow brought up the same subject in the courtroom.

"Your honor, I have no objection to answering if it will enlighten him any," the witness told the judge. "I do recall telling the Rev. Mr. Wright that I was offered a 15 per cent commission on the gross sales of these tablets, if I indorsed the tablets, which I was taking at the time. I never accepted their offer."

On the advice of counsel, Dr. Townsend did not answer.

"Didn't you ask Dr. Wright in Chicago to go down to a drug store and buy you some so you could see what they were like?" asked Sacharow.

After court had adjourned, Dr. Townsend said his interrupted ride from the hotel to East Cleveland was "not in any way a flight. It was a scheduled trip. We planned to go moderately fast in order to keep an engagement."

He added that he still intended to keep tonight's speaking engagement in Erie, Pa., 100 miles east of Cleveland.

When Dr. Townsend left the hearing of the Congressional committee in Washington, May 21, he refused to testify further on the ground the hearing was "unfair and unfriendly."

He, the Rev. Clinton Wunder, of New York, and John B. Kiefer, of Chicago, Townsend directors, were cited for contempt of the House of Representatives. Townsend had instructed his followers not to testify. Wright testified and later was removed from his position in the Townsend organization.

The Congressional contempt case is in the hands of the United States district attorney at Washington, but has not yet reached a grand jury. The district attorney's office today said that if an indictment should be obtained the case could not be brought to trial before September or Octiber. The trial court will hold no sessions until then.

Today's depositions were taken by the attorneys in connection with the Wright suit pending in common pleas court.

When the pension leader told Sacharow: "It's none of your business," the attorney replied: "It's our business to know whether you are going to continue to fool the American people."

Sacharow and Townsend's counsel—Tucker and Downey—frequently clashed in the morning session.

"I'll ask you to keep quiet," Sacharow once told Downey, and a few minutes later he said to Downey: "You're a pain in the neck to me."

Downey said: "Let the record show that this outburst of ill humor and rudeness resulted from my offer to produce the check."

He referred to a check for $10,000 to Dr. S. E. Taylor, who was operaing the Townsend Visual Education Co. Dr. Townsend said: "I don't know" when Sacharow asked him whether he signed the check.

Townsend remarked that "I pay no attention to the financial affairs of this organization," but estimated that Old-Age Revolving Pensions, Limited, had raised about $1,200,000 and had spent all but approximately $50,000. The present Townsend membership, he said, is between 4,500,000 and 5,000,000."

Sacharow asked: "Should anything happen to you, isn't it true, doctor, that any profits would go to your heirs and not to O. A. R. P.?"

Downey advised the witness not to answer.

"Don't you think that a lot of sacrifices are being made by these old people?" asked Sacharow.

Townsend's counsel objected and asserted Sacharow was making a speech.

"You don't want the old people to know that they are making sacrifices?" Sacharow asked, but there was no answer.

Downey and Sacharow then exchanged opinions on whether the witness was present voluntarily. Downey declared: "We must insist that counsel desist from improper and prejudicial questions."

Hoover Agents Study Inquiry Into Accounts

F. B. I. Head Calls Efforts Wasted as He Has No Broker Fund.

By the Associated Press.

Federal investigators yesterday were investigating a reported investigation of the Justice Department's chief investigator—J. Edgar Hoover.

Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, told reporters he had started an inquiry into reports that mysterious probers were checking up on his "brokerage accounts."

"They're going to be fooled," Hoover added. "As far as these so-called 'curiosity' investigators are concerned, I have no brokerage account."

Hoover declined to elaborate on the report of a secret inquiry into his finances, but said that if the investigators had come to him, he could have saved them the trouble of investigating.

In the Treasury, where officials continued their inquiry into the activities of Secret Service agents charged with having investigated Hoover's investigators, officials had "no comment" to make on Hoover's revelation of the new inquiry into his finances.

Secret Service men from Chicago and St. Paul continued conferences with officials yesterday concerning reports that their agents had been investigating the activities of Hoover's men.

Inquiries made of the Secret Service men indicated, official sources said, that their alleged investigation of Hoover's agents sought to develop the answer to one question—"Was the gun play of his men justified?"

Thomas J. Callahan and Grady L. Boatwright, Secret Service agents in charge of offices in Chicago and St. Paul, were closeted with Treasury Department officials today, answering questions in connection with a reported investigation of the activities of Hoover's Justice Department men in shooting down members of the John Dillinger gang.

State Will Survey Maryland Roads

Baltimore, July 21 (AP).—The State Roads Commission and the Federal Bureau of Public Roads will begin a three-phase survey of Maryland's roads at once, the roads commission announced today.

The survey, similar to those being conducted in 37 other States, will be financed from Federal funds. One and one-half per cent of the money allocated by the Federal bureau is set aside for such a survey.

The study of the State road system will cover financing, the type of roads, and the amount of traffic. The results of the survey will be turned over to the committee appointed by the last Legislature to study the State's roads.

Resort Visited By U. S. Envoy Reported Held

San Sebastian, Bower's Summer Home, Declared in Rebel Hands.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Paris, July 21.—French border police reported today that Gen. Emilio Mola, commanding Fascist rebels in northern Spain, has captured the important seaside resort of San Sebastian where many diplomats from Madrid, including United States Ambassador Claude G. Bowers, are summering.

Frontier reports from Hendaye said 400 rebels overpowered a government force and captured the town of Vera, near Behobie.

Mola reportedly marched on San Sebastian through Navarre, a monarchist stronghold, from Pamplona. He took all towns and villages en route.

Mola reportedly announced his intention of marching on Madrid as soon as he was sure of solid support for the rebellion behind him in the north.

Bitter Battle Forecast.

A bitter battle was believed imminent at San Sebastian since it was knwon that armed popular front followers were massing in the vicinity.

Mola was reported to have taken San Sebastian without a battle, his troops, however, were subjected to sniping all along the route to the city.

Other units of Mola's army under Col. Luy de Nueva marched out of Pamplona. They were reported to be waiting at Vera for reinforcements.

Border police reports of the rebel occupation of San Sebastian were confirmed in press dispatches from Hendaye, on the Franco-Spanish frontier.

Orders Intercepted.

At Perpignan listeners intercepted orders broadcast from Barcelona to blast all bridges between Terragone and Barcelona. It was reported from Puiggenda that Catalonia, of which Barcelona is the capital, is now under Communist control. The government requisitioned all trucks and automobiles in Catalonia to transport farmers and workers between Gerona and Barcelona.

The Barcelona road was reported barricaded every 200 yards.

The strength of the rebel movement in the north was indicated when Hendaye reported that Navarre monarchist peasants joined Mola's troops on their triumphant march to San Sebastian.

Hendaye police officially denied estimating the dead in Spain at 25,000. The police commander said:

"That is perfect nonsense. We never made such an estimate. Nor have refugees said anything corresponding to the estimate. Refugees have no way of compiling the total casualties. From our information we judge that the estimated figures are grossly exaggerated."

300 Reported Slain.

The Paris Soir reported from Barcelona that 300 were killed and 3,000 wounded in bitter fighting yesterday on the Ramblas, the main thoroughfare of the city. Several churches and convents were reported in flames.

The prefect of Pyrenees Orientales reported to the ministry of the city hall that Puijcerda near the French border is in the hands of Communists and that Communists are holding the international bridge at Bourg Madame. French guards were reinforced all along the frontier.

The prefect said that scores of Leftist refugees, including the governor of Pamplona, have entered France. He expected a big influx during the night as a result of San Sebastian's capture by the rebels.

Rebels in Five Provinces.

Hendaye, France, July 21 (AP).—At least five northern provinces are under control of Spanish rebels, two Letfist officials who fled over the border, asserted tonight.

The two were Emilio Salvatiero and Christino Iturbide, secretaries to the Governor of Navarre Province.

"When we fled from San Sebastian late this afternoon before the Fascists entered the city, we had official confirmation the provinces of Zaragoza, Navarre, Burgos, Valladolid and Guipuzcoa were in the hands of rebels," Salvatierio said.

Says Rebels Are Beaten.

Barcelona, Spain, July 21 (AP).—President Luis Companys of the semiautonomous Province of Catalonia himself a rebel leader in 1934, announced tonight the government is in full control of the situation in Barcelona.

The rebel leaders have been captured, he said, after four days of furious fighting.

Civilian followers of the popular front fought in the streets by the side of loyal civil guards and assault guards against rebel infantry and artillery units. Many buildings held by rebels, including the Hotel Colon, were bombarded by government planes.

The prisoners include Gen. Manuel Goded, reported co-leader of the rebellion with Gen. Francisco Franco. The Leftist government recently "banished" Goded to the Balearic Islands as military governor there at the same time that Franco was sent to a similar post in the Canary Islands.

A large number of officers also were captured, it was announced.

These warships are on their way to Spain to evacuate American citizens from the troubled zone if such action proves necessary. Above is a recent picture of the battleship Oklahoma, which was at Cherbourg, France, when orders were issued from the Navy Department. Below is the recently completed $12,000,000 cruiser Quincy. Last night it was steaming east, two days out from Norfolk, Va.

their families are safe and no American casualties have been reported. The consulate is functioning and does not need help. Two British cruisers are standing by ready to take on nationals.

"It is reported there are 3,000 armed workmen in the hills near the city defying the military.

"On the afternoon of July 20 there was fighting in front of the American consulate when troops fired upon crowds of workers, killing 30 and seriously wounding scores of people, but no Americans were hurt."

The State Department reported that 1,582 American citizens are registered as residents of Spain. These do not include tourists, who may number several hundred.

Eric C. Wendelin, third secretary of the American Embassy in Madrid, reported he had made arrangements for the concentration of the 466 United States citizens in that city at the embassy if this step is considered necessary. He reported that while Americans there were unharmed, they have been urged to stay indoors. Communications are seriously disrupted, and Wendelin, who communicated his message through the American Minister of Madrid, expressed doubt his telegrams were being delivered.

Wendelin reported further rebellion in Madrid had been suppressed by government forces, but conditions there were reported "quiet but serious."

"Malaga," the message said, "was reported to be in the hands of rebel forces and there were reports that these forces were marching to Madrid."

From Gibraltar, Consul Herbert O. Williams reported that communications with Spain were cut off; that Algeciras and La Linea were in the hands of the insurgents, and that many persons were reported to have been killed in those places. He reported hundreds of refugees were in Gibraltar.

From Barcelona Consul Lynn W. Franklins reported that since Sunday morning that city had been the center of Fascist uprising, but that Americans were safe. He said the major part of the army was loyal and was attempting to capture the rebels. He further reported many churches had been set on fire.

It is expected that midshipmen aboard the Oklahoma will be transferred to the battleships Wyoming and Arkansas, which are a part of the training squadron.

The order sending the two warships to Spain was issued by Admiral Standley, acting Secretary of the Navy, after a conference with Secretary Hull. Only a few hours earlier Hull had told newsmen he did not think the situation sufficiently serious to warrant sending ships.

The Oklahoma carries a crew of between 1,100 and 1,200. Her armament includes 10 14-inch guns. The Quincy is a 10,000-ton cruiser, carrying a crew of from 600 to 800. She is armed with 8-inch guns.

British Ships Stand By.

British warships already are standing by in Spanish waters. Consul Williams told the State Department the captain of H. M. S. Shamrock had been in touch with the British consul and the American consul at Malaga and had assured them all possible measures would be taken for the safeguarding of British and Americans in that city.

The British were responsible for rescuing Americans at Addis Ababa, Ethiopian capital, when the American consulate was surrounded and attacked by Ethiopian bandits. At that time there was some criticism in Congress and elsewhere of the failure of the United States to give adequate protection to its nationals.

Consul Franklin is a resident of Bethesda, Md. Besides Franklin and Ambassador Bowers, who is at the "summer embassy" at San Sebastian, American diplomatic officers in Spain are Hallett Johnson, of South Orange, N. J., counselor of embassy, Madrid; Walter H. Schoellkopf, Buffalo, N. Y., first secretary of embassy, Madrid; Eric C. Wendelin, Quincy, Mass., third secretary of embassy, Madrid; Thomas S. Horn, St. Louis, Mo., and Leo J. Kahanan, Dorchester, Mass., consuls at Barcelona; William E. Chapman, Oklahoma City, Okla., consul at Bilboa; John B. Johnson, Highgate, Vt., consular and Bolard Moore, Delaware, Ohio, vice consul at Madrid; George M. Graves, Bennington, Vt., consul at Malaga; Charles A. Bay, St. Paul, Minn., consul at Seville; Thomas D. Davis, McAlester, Okla., consul and Milton K. Wells, Bristow, Okla., vice consul at Valencia, and William W. Corcoran, who was appointed to the foreign service from Massachusetts, but whose home address is not listed in State Department files, consul at Vigo.

stood to have bombarded rebels at Coruna, northwestern port, prior to attempting to take over the city.

At Segovia, just north of Madrid, insurgents were said to have been beaten. Revolters at Zaragoza, in the northeast, were reported to be on the point of surrendering after a bombardment by loyal airplanes.

The government claimed some rebel planes were damaged in the Zaragoza attack. It said it had 90 airplanes at its disposition, as well as several others seized from the rebels.

Newspapers claimed the rebellion had failed in Madrid. They asserted it was badly disorganized in the south, particularly at Seville, which they said was the rebel headquarters.

Desertions Reported.

There were reports of increasing desertions among the revolters, despite special measures taken by their officers to prevent them.

A moratorium on payments and restriction on bank withdrawals was extended by the government until Sunday, while the stock exchange suspended operations for 48 hours.

All state employes who aided the subversive movement were ordered discharged.

Restrictions were placed on the carrying of arms. The government ruled that members of the Socialist and Communist militia must obtain special permits to carry rifles and pistols, and that other persons will not be allowed to carry weapons.

Fires were set in some Madrid churches after Leftists heard rumors Fascists were sniping from them. In the occasional gun fights, the militia forces were inclined to shoot more indiscriminately than the regular police, and they were instructed to hold their fire to protection of public buildings.

Dominating Positions.

Outbreaks at Gijon, Almeria, Alcala de Henares and El Pardo were crushed, the government declared.

The civil governor of Almeria reported to the ministry of marine insurgents there surrended. At Alcala rebels took refuge in a cathedral and an adjoining convent, but were quickly dominated by loyal forces "with considerably heavy losses to the rebels," officials asserted.

Moves Toward Provinces.

Government forces assumed complete control of the capital after several sharp skirmishes, the official announcement said.

Armed and under the supervision of loyal civil guards, the peasant columns moved quickly toward Valladolid and Zaragoza provinces, acknowledged by the government as principal rebel centers in the north.

In other sectors, additional forces swept toward Burogs and Toledo.

High on Leon Peak, in the mountainous region of Guadarrama, 40 miles from Madrid, the guns of hastily recruited defending forces bristled from the rocky ridges.

In the university section and on the outskirts of the capital, 5,000 militiamen were concentrated to forestall any insurgent attack on the suburbs.

Planes Rout Rebels.

Loyal airplanes, the government declared, broke up the departure of a column of rebel troops leaving Burgos Province at Aranda yesterday.

An intercepted radio report from Cordova reported rebel forces there were in a desperate position in the face of superior defending troops. Leaders of the insurgents were declared to have asked help from commanders of other military rebels in the surrounding area.

The government announced it had issued orders forbidding armed forces to travel in Red Cross automobiles because of international regulations governing the care of wounded during military engagements.

Situation Clearing.

In the capital the situation was declared to be rapidly clearing, although residents of the city were still nervous over possible developments. The war-like atmosphere which pervaded Madrid yesterday was somewhat dissipated in the official announcements which said rebel forces were being dispersed rapidly.

A relief column from Oviedo, which was sent hastily to Gijon, returned without being needed when the revolt movement in the latter region was halted.

Official circles believed the death of Gen. Jose San Jurjo, former associate of former King Alfonso, of Spain, was a serious blow to rebel hopes. The general was killed yesterday in an airplane accident in Portugal.

Many women in the capital aided the armed forces by conducting a house-to-house search to uncover the presence of fascist snipers.

More Invaders Fly to Spain; La Linea Fired

90 Are Reported Killed in Border Fights; Food Supplies Low.

By the Associated Press.

Gibraltar, July 21.—Heavy fighting was reported at La Linea tonight as new contingents of rebel troops reached the mainland by plane from Morocco. A section of the city was in flames.

Ninety persons were reported killed in sharp clashes along the border which sent the sounds of combat floating across to Gibraltar.

The military insurgents at La Linea began consolidating their position by planting nests of machine guns and digging fortifications in preparation for an expected attack by warships.

In Gibraltar food supplies were running low because of the crowded condition of the British territory. There were so many refugees authorities allowed only British subjects and Spaniards employed on the island to cross the frontier.

Neutral ground between Gibraltar and La Linea was crowded with women and children and patients who had fled from hospitals in the Spanish town.

The frontier guard was strengthened with firemen who were detailed to stand by with hoses to guard against any attempt to rush the frontier.

A large fire was burning in the center of La Linea. Residents of the Spanish town appealed for aid to the Gibraltar fire department and a brigade was sent to the scene.

The sound of heavy firing was heard at sunset in an easterly direction at sea.

Police headquarters announced 119 Moroccan soldiers who landed at Algeciras were killed by loyal guards.

Two unidentified British subjects who disregarded an order not to stand on balconies were wounded when they were fired on at Algeciras by Communist militiamen.

The rebel commander at La Linea was quoted as saying, "If the government warships bombard us, all available aircraft will immediately take off from Ceuta and other Moroccan towns and in less than ten minutes all the ships will be sunk."

The British tug Energetic returned from Algeciras with 120 British refugees. The Norwegian steamer Frank reported Spanish planes dropped bombs near the ship while she was passing the Straits of Tarifa.

Marching on Madrid.

Biarritz, France, July 21 (U.P.).—Terrified refugees streaming across the Franco-Spanish frontier tonight declared rebel forces in Spain continued their march on Madrid and remain masters in southern Spain despite official government denials.

Travelers reported the world may have been hoodwinked by government messages ostensibly broadcast by the Seville radio claiming government forces control that important point. But the messages, it was said, were sent out by a station under government control far from Seville but using the Seville station's wave length.

Fired on From Air.

Bayonne, France, July 21 (U.P.).—Rebel troops under Gen. Emilio Mola and airplanes escorting his column machine gunned the city of San Sebastian before they moved into occupation of the famous seaside resort, it was reported tonight. U. S. Ambassador Claude G. Bowers, the British Ambassador and other diplomats, are summering in San Sebastian.

After the preliminary strafing of the city, Mola's troops entered without resistance.

U. S. to Transfer Kress to Alcatraz

As the result of a second-escape attempt, Robert Kress, serving ten years at Leavenworth Prison Annex for theft of firearms and attempted prison break, will be transferred to Alcatraz, it was announced yesterday.

The second attempt to gain freedom came Monday, Sanford Bates, director of the Federal Prisons Bureau, said yesterday. Kress, armed with a knife and a rope, was slightly wounded with buckshot when he refused to surrender to a guard who had surprised him.

Originally sentenced to a five-year term in McNeil Island Penitentiary for larceny, Kress was transferred to Leavensworth when he tried to flee the island in a boat. He was recaptured and his sentence increased to ten years.

WPA White Collar Aids Get Vacation

Aubrey Williams, deputy WPA administrator, said yesterday that Works Progress Administration white-collar employes would get vacations with pay.

WPA supervisory and white-collar workers had previously been barred from vacations because they are on the same pay roll as the mass of relief workers. The order does not apply to the rank and file employed on WPA projects.

2 Men Claiming Triplets Swap Words in Court

Mother of 3 Boys Admits Having Relations With Both 'Fathers.'

By the Associated Press.

West Palm Beach, Fla., July 21.—Two men who both claim to be the father of triplets born to the woman now married to one of them argued the matter angrily today at a court hearing to determine the parentage.

Circuit Judge C. E. Chillingworth, who had to quiet the disputants and threaten to bar excited relatives from his chambers, took the case under advisement after three hours of testimony. He said he would announce a decision in several days. The 9-month-old boys were not brought to the hearing.

The rivals are Louis D. Pierre, 35, automobile mechanic of Miami, and T. J. Miller, 56, barber of West Palm Beach, who recently married the triplets' mother.

Acknowledge Relations.

She acknowledged having lived with both men. She named Miller as the father, however, and accused Pierre of detaining her against her will and assaulting her.

Following his wife to the witness stand, Miller testified he first had relations with the mother December 29, 1934. The babies were born in a Miami hospital October 2, 1935.

E. M. Baynes, counsel for the defendants, asked Miller if he heard from the mother while she was living at Pierre's house.

"Yes, she wrote me begging me to carry her away," he replied.

"Why didn't you get her?"

"I tried to but was ordered off the property by that thing."

He stood up and pointed at Pierre.

Judge Quiets Them.

"Wait a minute, don't you call me anything," Pierre flared.

"That's what you are," said Miller.

The judge quited the men.

Soon Mrs. M. J. Rodriquez, Pierre's mother, engaged in an argument with Mrs. Miller and the judge threatened to put her out.

Mrs. Miller testified she went to live at Pierre's house February 10, 1935, because he promised her a job. She said he started his assaults four days later.

After Pierre testified and his attorney introduced a statement purportedly signed by Mrs. Miller acknowledging his parentage, her lawyer, E. M. Baynes, moved to dismiss the case, but Circuit Judge C. E. Chillingsworth denied the motion.

Oklahoma Downpour Follows Indians' Rite

Gore, Okla., July 21 (AP).—The Kee-Too-Wahs saw in sodden fields tonight fulfillment of their belief that a weird rite would bring rain to their drought-parched lands.

For the first time the Kee-too-wahs, keepers of the seven sacred fires of the Cherokees since they were borne over the "Trail of Tears" from Tennessee, had added to their annual rites of thanksgiving a supplication for rain.

There were skeptics among the crowd of nearly 5,000 but:

"The rains will come," said the old men of the tribe.

Thunderclouds gathered over the parched lands of the Cherokees, and the rain began pattering last night, at first slowly, then increasing to a steady downpour.

At nearby Muskogee no rain fell.

Farmers Contest Story Of Banker's 'Widow'

Charleston, W. Va., July 21 (AP).—Two Lincoln County farmers testified today they talked to Louis R. Sweetland at his Hamlin Bank on February 24, 1934, the day Mrs. Nellie Stratton Sweetland claims she and the elderly banker were wed at Pikeville, Ky.

The auburn-haired Mrs. Sweetland, suing in Federal Court for a widows 'share of Sweetland's estimated $1,000,000 estate, yawned while the farmers, Lucian Edwards and Henry Huffman, told their stories. The defense rested its case tentatively.

Key to Murder Laid to Gaddy

when passing the second floor on his rounds at 1 a. m. Thursday morning, the hour fixed as the time of the murder.

For the first time since Sunday morning, when photographers were permitted to make pictures of the sportily dressed violinist, word of his condition came from the jail on the fifteenth floor of the courthouse.

Geoffrey Ingle, jailer, said Wollner was in "good spirits" and had "an excellent appetite."

In contrast, he said, Gaddy was very pale and "nervous and jittery."

Asked about a report that the 28-year-old watchman had eaten nothing since his incarceration Saturday, Ingle replied:

"He may have eaten one or two sandwiches sent him by his wife, but outside of those, I am sure he has not eaten."

Blames Nervousness.

The jailer attributed Gaddy's reported failure to eat to nervousness rather than to a deliberate hunger-strike.

No report was received about Miss Ward, held since Sunday. An exception to the iron-clad rule against visitors had been made in her case to permit her to receive attention from a physician. She is described as tubercular.

So far as could be learned, none of the persons held incommunicado has demanded an attorney or made any other move to obtain relase.

W. H. Rymer, piano dealer at whose home Wollner was arrested and who tried in vain to see the violinist late yesterday, today said he did not intend to engage a lawyer at present, although he reiterated he would gladly put up $20,000 bond for his friend.

Funeral Services Held.

Dayton, Ohio, July 21 (AP).—Relatives joined today in private funeral services for Helen Clevenger, 18-year-old victim of a hotel-room slaying in Asheville, N. C.

Burial was in a family plot at Fletcher, 25 miles north of Dayton.

At the request of her father, services were barred to everyone except relatives and close friends. During the day several hundred persons visited the village to view the body. The Rev. Emory Fritz, of the Presbyterian Church, conducted the services.

Miss Clevenger had never lived in Fletcher, her father's old home, but had visited there several times. Her father remained with relatives tonight, and did not indicate when he would return to his New York home. The girl's mother, an invalid, was unable to attend the funeral.

Mrs. Proctor, 68, Dies in Hospital

Mrs. Katie G. Proctor, 68, native of Washington and wife of William A. Proctor, retired grocer, died yesterday at Providence Hospital after an illness of one week.

Mrs. Proctor was educated in the city's public schools. She lived here all her life. She was a member of St. Stephen's Catholic Church. She is survived by her husband.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow morning from Chambers' funeral home, 1400 Chapin street northeast, at 8:30 o'clock. Mass will be at 9 a. m., in St. Stephen's Church. Burial will be in Glenwod Cemetery.

Rain Halts 'Debs' Bows Before King

London, July 21 (AP).—Rain, which drenched hundreds of debutantes expecting to be presented to King Edward, halted a brilliant garden parade today.

Nearly half of the 500 smartly-gowned women had curtsied before the British monarch when the first drops fell on the gardens of Buckingham Palace.

The presentation continued for 10 minutes and then, as the rain increased, the King ordered the function abandoned and the lord chamberlain turned back the line of wet, bedraggled women.

The King received the fortunate debutantes under a silken canopy. He was dressed in dark gray morning suit and wore a gray top hat until he ascended the dais in the tent.

Five hundred other debutantes, attired under the lord chamberlain's instructions in "afternoon dress," are to be presented tomorrow.

Black Legion Murdered Man 'For Fun,' Is Latest Accusation

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, July 21.—Prosecutor Duncan C. McCrea tonight said he had obtained corroboration of an accusation by Dayton Dean, Black Legion "executioner," that a colored person was lured to a lonely swamp and shot to death for the entertainment of a group of terrorists on a Saturday night drinking party.

The prosecutor said James Roy Lorance, named by Dean as one of the witnesses to the "thrill" slaying, had admitted he was present when Silas Coleman, 42-year-old colored World War veteran, was killed in a swamp near Pinckney, Mich., late in May, 1935.

Others accused by Dean are Harvey Davis, reputed Black Legion "colonel." Ervin D. Lee and John Bannerman, all awaiting trial for the Black Legion slaying of Charles A. Poole May 12, and Charles Rouse, charged with being an accessory after the fact in the Poole case.

Killing Described.

Dean said Coleman was killed because Davis "wanted to see what it feels like to shoot a Negro."

The prosecutor made public a statement he attributed to Lorance. It said:

"I was at the cottage at Strawberry Lake (near Pinckney) with Bannerman and Lee when Davis came out on Saturday afternoon and said a Negro would be brought out later. Dean came out later with the Negro and Davis told us to get our guns. He said it was to be a one-way ride."

Then, the statement said, the men took Coleman to a swamp and killed him.

"Took No Part in It."

"I saw the shooting," the statement said, "but I took no part in it. The gun I had was registered and Davis advised me not to for fear the bullets could be traced."

Warrants charging the five men with kidnaping and murder were issued late today. The prosecutor said they would be arraigned tomorrow.

The formal charges brought to 57 the number of men held in three Michigan counties in connection with Black Legion crimes ranging from assault to murder.

Second Laid to Band.

The slaying disclosed today was the second in which members of the hooded band have been accused explicitly. The other—the roadside killing of Poole—set in motion the investigations which brought existence of the night-riding band to light.

Coleman's bullet-pierced body was found late in May, 1935, propped against a post in a swamp near Pinckney. The crime is listed as unsolved on Livingston County records.

Dean, who has pleaded guilty to a murder charge in the Poole killing, said he was instructed to bring a colored person—"it didn't matter where he came from as long as he was black"—to a cottage in Livingston County, where four men and their wives were spending the week-end.

Coleman was induced to accompany him to the spot on the pretext that a contractor who owed him some wages was there, Dean said. He said Coleman was taken "down a dark road to a bridge where there was water on both sides and a marsh."

"The colored fellow came around to the rear of the car, wondering, to see what we were doing there, and just as he came around and faced up, they started shooting," Dean said. "He made a quick jump in the marsh and they fired after him."

Realty Dealers Hear Virginia's Law Explained

State Commissioner Trice Addresses Gathering in Alexandria.

The real estate business used to be a racket; now it is a profession, declared C. V. W. Trice, of Nor- Estate Commission, last night, in an folk, member of the Virginia Real address to 150 real estate brokers and salesmen in the George Mason Hotel, Alexandria.

This meeting, of Northern Virginia realtors, was held under the auspices of the Alexandria, Arlington and Fairfax County Real Estate Board. Robert L. Kane, of Alexandria, vice president of the board, presided. Otto Hollowell, of Norfolk, secretary of the Virginia Real Estate Association, introduced the speaker and the other two members of the commission—R. L. Rush, Roanoke, chairman, and William L. Tyler, Richmond.

Hollowell called attention to the fact that the State commission called upon the local board to report on any person applying for a license to deal in real estate, before such license is issued.

Trice Discusses Law.

Commissioner Trice took up the various sections of the Virginia Real Estate license law, and urged that all real estate men take the law seriously, and assist in its enforcement. Many dealers, he said, violate the provisions of the law unintentionally, because they are not sufficiently familiar with them. The commission, he said, is using every effort in its power to see that the law is carried out in detail, as a protection to the brokers, as well as the general public.

He quoted the qualifications for a license—that it shall be granted only to persons who bear a good reputation for honesty, truthfulness and fair dealings, and are competent to transact the business of a real estate broker or a real estate salesman in such a manner as to safeguard the interests of the public.

Tells of Other States.

Another provision of the law to which he referred is that every real estate broker shall maintain a place of business in the State of Virginia, and if he maintains more than one place of business, a duplicate license shall be issued for each branch office maintained. Many instances of violation of this provision, through ignorance of the law, have occurred, he said. In case a salesman severs his relations with a broker, the latter is required to turn in to the commission the license of such salesman. The broker is also required to notify the commission of any change in his business address.

Mr. Trice cited a number of cases of action taken in other States under the real estate laws. Licenses may be suspended, he said, for failure to display the license on the wall of the office; they may be revoked if the holder is found to be untrustworthy; if he has been convicted of a felony; if the applicant does not bear a good reputation in the community a license may be refused, and in Iowa, he said, one license was refused because the applicant could not pass the required examination. No written examination is required in Virginia, but if the applicant is not found to be competent under the law, he may be questioned as to his ability to conduct business.

The license law, he said, is bound to raise the standard of the profession and to protect the public. It prohibits an agent or salesman from acting for more than one party in a transaction without the knowledge of all parties for whom he acts; from accepting a commission or valuable consideration for the performance of any of the acts specified in the law, from any person except his employer, without the knowledge or consent of the employer; from failure within a reasonable time to account for or to remit any moneys coming into his possession which belong to others; paying a commission or valuable consideration to any person for acts or services performed in violation of the act, or any conduct which constitutes improper, fraudulent, or dishonest dealing, such as misrepresentation of a property to a client.

Mr. Trice stressed the fact that the law provides for violations a fine of not to exceed $500, or a jail sentence of not more than six months, or both, in the case of an individual, or a fine of $1,000 in the case of a corporation, officers or agents of corporations to be subject to the same penalties as individuals.

2 More Held in Slaying.

Portsmouth, Ohio, July 21 (AP).—Sheriff Arthur L. Oakes arrested two more steel workers today in connection with the slaying of a company guard during the recent 52-day strike at the Wheeling Steel Corporation plant.

They were Ellis M. Williams, 41, of Slocum, and Clifford Dupuy, 36, both union pickets during the strike. Simon Ginsburg, a special steel company guard, was killed in the exchange of shots. Three other pickets have been arrested in connection with Ginsburg's death.

Infantile Paralysis Spreads With 235 Stricken; 15 Are Dead

New Cases Reported in Alabama and Tennessee But None in Mississippi; Precautionary Steps Redoubled by Doctors.

By the Associated Press.

Montgomery, Ala., July 21.—Infantile paralysis, its death toll at 15, continued spreading slowly today in Alabama and Tennessee, but Mississippi reported no new cases in a tri-State outbreak of the disease.

The death of an 8-year-old girl at Birmingham brought Alabama's casualties to 11. Four have died in Tennessee.

Eight new cases in Alabama and four in Tennessee brought to 235 the total number stricken by the disease.

Of the 235 cases, 181 are in Alabama, 43 in Tennessee and 11 in Mississippi. The latter State has reported no new cases since Saturday.

Health authorities redoubled their precautionary steps. Dr. C. W. Williams, Tennessee health commissioner, is holding regional meetings to explain a newly-developed experimental nasal spray preventive.

Most of the cases in the three States are in the area where Tennessee and Mississippi join Alabama, although there are sufferers in 39 of Alabama's 67 counties.

Relief and CCC Labor to Clear Sites for Dams

Flood Control Program to Start Despite Lack of U. S. Funds.

By the Associated Press.

Seeking to initiate a Nation-wide flood control program this year, despite the lack of Congressional appropriation, the Administration decided yesterday to mobilize relief workers and CCC enrollees to clear dam and reservoir sites and carry out other preliminary work.

The decision to use available funds came after a delegation of the United States Flood Control Federation told officials here that a start must be made this summer to avoid "panic" conditions when fall freshets return to the areas devastated by floods this spring.

Contending the preliminary work was all that could have been accomplished this year even if Congress had provided funds for the $308,000,000 list of projects authorized in the omnibus rivers and harbors act, officials said an appropriation would be asked at the next session to construct the heavy structures required for completion of the program.

Congress earmarked $128,000,000 of the $1,425,000,000 relief appropriation for flood control and conservation work, and officials said this would pay the wages of thousands of workers on flood control projects in addition to financing soil conservation activities.

With work in New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania scheduled to get under way first, Dr. Abel Wolman, head of the water use division of the national resources committee, promised the federation that a list of "emergency" projects would be presented to President Roosevelt early in August and that work would be started almost immediately after their approval.

As the first step, Wolman said, Maj. Gen. Edward M. Markham, Chief of Army Engineers, will prepare a list in the next few days for comment by other Federal agencies concerned with flood control, navigation, reforestation, and prevention of soil erosion.

New York Leads List.

New York projects lead the priority list because of the new law authorizing formation of flood control districts to co-operate with the Federal Government, but West Virginia, New England States, and others with projects included in the omnibus act will have to pass co-operating legislation, Wolman said.

A possibility that in addition to use of WPA and CCC labor, some funds might be provided by the Public Works Administration, was indicated by Secretary Ickes, chairman of the resources committee, who also conferred with the flood control delegation.

The Army engineers also have some money available for test borings and preparation of detailed specifications, Wolman said, and might employ construction workers.

Explaining that building of check dams, rerouting of roads and streams and clearing dam and reservoir sites would be carried out by the WPA and CCC, Wolman's aid, Col. F. C. Harrington, chief WPA engineer, had promised to provide all labor required within three days after requisitions were issued.

Much of the work, particularly that in constructing a huge chain of reservoirs in the vicinity of Pittsburgh, which suffered severely from last spring's floods, will be near industrial areas with an abundance of relief labor, Wolman said. He conferred during the day with CCC officials concerning establishment of additional camps in the areas devastated.

A. & P. Delays Ad Ruling.

New York, July 21 (AP).—An executive of the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. said today no decision had been reached as to the resumption by the company of newspaper advertising in the area extending roughly in a 50-mile radius from New York City. The spokesman said such advertising had been halted by the company in all newspapers in the area because manufacturers formerly giving allowances toward the "pushing" of their products by newspaper advertising had stopped those allowances.

Montana Vote Gives Gov. Holt An Early Lead

By the Associated Press.

Helena, Mont., July 21.—Gov. Elmer Holt took an early lead tonight in the contest for the Democratic nomination for governor as first returns were counted in the Montana primary election.

Holt, 561 votes; Miles Romney, 500; Representative Roy E. Ayers, 287; A. L. Maury, 213; F. H. Hayes, 20.

T. O. Larson, 33; L. R. Carroll, 32; Lesl Stevens, 17; Hugh Egan, 16.

Despite 100-degree temperatures in some parts of the State, the voting was heavy with some estimates that 60 per cent of the 251,807 qualified voters cast ballots. Returns were reported slowly.

Representative Joseph Monaghan forged ahead of three opponents in the Democratic race for United States Senator on the basis of earliest returns.

Five scattered precincts gave Monaghan 302 votes, United States Senator James E. Murray, seeking re-election, 221; S. V. Stewart, 99; W. B. Sands, 47.

Bridge Will Link 2 Virginia Cities

The Federal Bureau of Roads yesterday approved construction of a free Bowers Hill bridge crossing the South Branch of Elizabeth River linking Norfolk and Portsmouth, Va. The cost was estimated at $356,000.

Thomas H. MacDonald, chief of the Roads Bureau, said action was taken after considering protests submitted by the Norfolk-Portsmouth Bridge Co., Inc., and the City of Portsmouth.

He added he had advised State Highway Commissioner Henry G. Shirley today the bureau would expedite the approval of construction plans as soon as they are received from Richmond.

Have you the eyes of a careful shopper?

How to read character

"Careful" eyes
Narrow...set deeply into the flesh which slightly overhangs them. Glance . . . penetrating, calculating. Eyes that appraise true value...smart enough to see that their owner gets his money's worth.

"Appreciative" lips
Of generous proportions ...wide, full, soft-textured, but firmly held without drooping. These lips relish luxury, but have the will power to say "no" when tempted to over-indulge.

"Determined" chin
Prominent, with decided out-thrust, but conspicuous for length rather than width. More slender and refined than the "bulldog" chin of the stubborn type. The chin of one who sticks to problems until solved.

'Dying' Soldiers Puff Cigarets In Sham Battle

Confederate and Federal Troops Seek Solace; Notables Present.

Manassas, Va., July 21.—Not all the smoke on the Manassas battlefield came from the cannon and rifles today. Some of it curled up from cigarettes. And the cigarettes were in the hands of "Confederates" and "Federals" who were supposed to be lying "dead" on the field.

Maj. Stonewall Jackson, a namesake, but not a relative of "the" Stonewall Jackson, played the role of the famous Confederate general. However, he did not have whiskers.

Col. Charles J. Miller, commanding the Fifth Marines, of Quantico, portrayed Irvin McDowell, leader of the Union forces. It seemed strange to see the gallant Marines, masquerading as Federals, take a licking.

Col. Robert Lee Longstreet, son of the Confederate general, was a spectator. He was seen conversing with Battalion Chief Edward O'Connor, the Washington smoke-eater. Mrs. Floyd King, widow of Gen. King, a member of Jackson's staff, also was in the stand.

The crowd of 40,000, with the 10,000 automobiles, was handled with magnificent ease and courtesy. For this bouquets go to Harry P. Davis, Mayor of Manassas; Branch Spalding, of Fredericksburg, co-ordinating superintendent of the National Park Service in Virginia; Capt. H. B. Nicholas, superintendent of State police and various members of the organizations that sponsored the re-enactment—the Manassas Battlefield Park Association, the National Park Service, the Manassas-Prince William County Chamber of Commerce and the State commission on conservation and development.

Two thousand Marines, infantrymen and artillerymen took part in the sham battle. They fired 150,000 rounds of ammunition. After the battle, spectators ran out to pick up the empty shells. Some of them found, in addition, bullets fired by warriors 75 years ago.

William F. Montavon, department director of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, who witnessed the battle today, can tell a romantic Civil War story when he is in the mood. His father was a soldier, and at one tage of the war was on a raiding party in Northern territory. With a confiscated chicken under his arm, he went into a farm house to have it cooked. There he met and fell in love with a beautiful Northern lass. Hence Mr. Montavon was careful today not to cheer for either side.

Dr. W. B. Daly, 80, Dies in Glen Echo

Funeral services for Dr. William B. Daly, 80, retired Washington dentist, who died Sunday at the home of his son, Aubrey T. Daly, Glen Echo, Md., will be held at 9 a. m. today at the W. W. Chambers Funeral Home 1400 Chapin street, northwest. Requiem mass will be said at 9:30 a. m. in St. Matthew's Church. Burial will be at Holy Rood Cemetery.

Dr. Daly, a native of Washington, was a son of Dr. John E. Daly, one of the city's pioneer dentists. His mother was Mary Dixon, a granddaughter of the surveyor Dixon of the Mason-Dixon line fame. Dr. Daly, a grand knight of Potomac Council, Knights of Columbus, served as a page in the United States Senate. Later he became the first electrotype operator in the Government Printing Office. He was graduated in dentistry from the old National University Medical School, which later became George Washington University Medical School, where he lectured after graduation. He served for a number of years as president of the District of Columbia Dental Board.

Mrs. Gerhard Dies; Wife of War Aid

Mrs. Emma A. Gerhard, 65, wife of Adolph Gerhard, retired chief clerk of the War Department general staff, died Monday in Garfield Hospital.

She was prominent in activities of the Keller Memorial Lutheran Church and at one time was on the board of directors of Casualty Hospital.

Mrs. Gerhard came here from Milwaukee, Wis., in 1900, and has made her home in Washington ever since.

She is survived by her husband and two daughters, Mildred I. Gerhard, of this city and Mrs. Louise G. Bittner, of Denver, Col.

Manassas Battle Restaged

Manassas. The Henry house, where Mrs. Judith Henry, bedridden from old age, was killed by artillery fire, stands there on the plateau, flanked by barns and outbuildings. And just to the north are pines like those from which the Federals debouched on that day long ago.

No, it hasn't changed much. Better still, as the orators pointed out today, it never will change now, for the Federal Government and the Virginia government have moved to make it a national battlefield park. That, together with the seventy-fifth anniversary, was the reason for the celebration today.

The crowds began arriving early this morning, and before the first cannon boomed 10,000 automobiles were parked off the Lee Highway, known in other days as the Warrenton Pike.

Spectators in '61, Also.

There were crowds of spectators back in '61, too, as was recalled by Wilbur C. Hall, chairman of the Virginia State Commission on Conservation and Development, one of the orators today.

"Some of the leaders of the North at first thought that this war would be only of short duration," Hall recalled. "In fact, so lightly did they consider the conflict that some of the social celebrities from Washington came down to view the battle, witnessing it from this very hill as if it were a pageant, a sort of social event of the day."

History records that these sightseers, regarding the event as a monster picnic, were a nuisance to Gen. Irvin McDowell, the Union commander.

McDowell's march to what was known as the "Alexanderia line" began a few months after the fall of Fort Sumter in the harbor of Charleston, S. C. That was on April 13, 1861. Two days later Abraham Lincoln, inaugurated only the month before while Federal sharpshooters lined the buildings along Pennsylvania avenue, issued his call for 75,000 men to serve 90 days. And two days after that Virginia seceded from the Union, seized the Harpers Ferry Arsenal and the Norfolk Navy Yard.

Confederates Near Washington.

The Confederate pickets were in sight of Washington, and the city was getting impatient. The newspapers demanded action, cried out for a march on Richmond, now the capital of the Confederacy. Gen. Winfield Scott, hero of the War with Mexico, ordered McDowell across the Potomac.

On July 16 Gen. McDowell began his march on Manassas, where he was to face Gen. Beauregard, his old classmate at West Point, who a few months before had directed the fall of Fort Sumter.

McDowell's army was a weird-looking one. The Federal blue had not yet been issued, and the uniforms were of all varieties. The New York Zouaves, an aggregation of firemen who had answered Lincoln's call, wore gaudy pantaloons such as the modern Shriner sports. There was another New York outfit in Scotch highland kilts. And there were some, indeed, who still were in civilian clothes.

The Confederate forces, from a sartorial standpoint, were not much better off. Three of the Confederate generals, it has been recorded, still wore their old United States Army uniforms.

Stage for Battle Set.

Gen. McDowell's forces went by way of Fairfax, where the Confederate outposts fell back without resistance. On the morning of July 18 they were within 4 miles of Manassas Junction, and the stage for the battle was set.

Over much the same route today came Assistant Secretary of War Harry Woodring, District Commissioners Melvin C. Hazen and Dan I. Sultan, Capt. Edward A. Duff, chief of naval chaplains; Arno B. Cammerer, director of the National Park Service; the Rev. John J. Burke, Catholic authority on the history of the War Between the States, and other celebrities from Washington.

From Richmond and elsewhere in Virginia, besides Dr. Freeman and Mr. Hall, came Gov. George C. Peery of Virginia; the Right Rev. H. St. George Tucker, Episcopal Bishop of Virginia; Bishop Collins Denny of the Methodist Church Church South; Representative Howard W. Smith, of Alexandria; Brig. Gen. Gardner Waller, adjutant general, of Virginia; Walter Hopkins, commander in chief of the Sons of the American Revolution, and State Senator John W. Rust, of Fairfax.

Capt. Harry Wooding was there, too, probably the most interesting spectator of the lot. Fighting under Longstreet, Wooding took part in the battle of Manassas. Now 92, he might pass for a man of 60. He has been Mayor of Danville, Va., for 44 years and has just been elected for another four-year term.

Hot Day, Says Wooding.

"Yes," said Wooding, puffing on a cigar, "it was hot that day; hotter than it is today, I guess."

"It was pretty hot for the Yanks, too," put in another old-timer.

"Yeah," smiled Wooding, "so 'tis said."

Gen. R. M. (Bob) Colvin, of Harrisonburg, Va., thrilled the spectators with a demonstration of the rebel yell. At 91 he has the pink complexion and clear eye of a 2-year-old. Gen. L. W. Cox, of Charlottesville, and R. B. Cushing, of Manassas, were other Confederate veterans on the field.

At 1:30 o'clock, after a concert by the Fifth United States Marine Band, Presiding Officer Rust introduced Bishop Tucker, who gave the invocation.

Mr. Hall, who introduced Gov. Peery, referred to Manassas as "the most thrilling and fateful event in the entire range of American history."

"In spite of the tragedies that accompanied this battle and the war," he said, "there is something really beautiful to me on this occasion, for I see in it not the glorification of war, but the fact that here, on this once bloody and now historic battlefield, the strong hand of the Federal Government will develop this area—not for another war, not where the youth of our land might be sacrificed—but, rather, into another great national battlefield park for the purpose of education and memorialization."

Gov. Peery, tall and raw-boned like one of his fighting ancestors, echoed this sentiment, and then called on Dr. Freeman.

The Richmond editor, a Pulitzer Prize winner for his Lee biography, told the great assemblage that there were valuable lessons to be learned from Manassas and he cited some of them.

He characterized as an "incredible mistake" President Lincoln's call for 75,000 men for a 90-day enlistment. With this enlistment period approaching an end, he said, the Union generals tried to hurry their campaign. And some of the men, he recalled, literally left their guns in the rear and marched from the field when their 90-day enlistment was up.

"This field," said Dr. Freeman, "cries out the warning: Enlistments adequate for the duration of the war."

He also cited the difference in age between the Confederate and Union commanders. The Confederate leaders, he said, were young men for the most part, while the Union, aside from McDowell, did not have a division commender under 55.

"Youth was on the side of the Confederacy, he said, while "age, burdened with too many political generals, was on the other side of the hills."

By this time, a battery of guns had taken a position on the plateau in front of the Henry house. This was Imboden's Confederate artillery. The battle was about to begin

In a moment Freeman's voice was drowned out as the medley from cannon, rifles, bugles and drums rolled down from the plateau.

Imboden was in trouble. He was being raked by Federal fire. Presently those in the grandstand saw the horses hitched to the caissons, and then a dash for the other end of the plateau, where Jackson's brigade was standing "like a stone wall."

Now the Federals (Quantico Marines attired in blue dungaree fatigure uniforms) came through the pines and rushed the spot that Imboden had just evacuated. The Confederate infantrymen supporting the artillery fell back before them.

Pointing to Jackson, Bee shouted to his men:

"Rally behind the Virginians!"

The Federals advanced down from the Henry house and charged the Confederate position. Here was a brand of warfare that would have seemed strange in France. With breasts bared, the men in blue and the men in gray blazed away at each other from a distance of 20 yards. Their commanders were out in front, waving their sabers in encouragement.

By this time the field was littred with "dead" and "wounded," and the stretcher bearers were running out from both sides. A drummer boy was among the fallen.

Out of the haze that now hung over the north end of the plateau came two batteries of Federal artillery, commanded by Capt. Charles Griffin and Capt. James B. Ricketts. They halted at a point just opposite Imboden's Confederate battery and unlimbered.

Now the plateau became an inferno, with the batteries on both sides hammering away and the Federal infantrymen trying to break Jackson's stone wall.

Off in the distance a cavalry outfit could be seen galloping up to the Confederate rallying position. This was Gen. J. E. B. Stuart's hard-riding, yelling Virginians, every one the owner of his own horse.

Brig. Gen. Joseph E. Johnston's division meantime had arrived from the Shenandoah Valley ot reinforce Beauregard, and the tide now was about to turn in favor of the Confederates.

The gaily caparisoned Fire Zouaves from New York had been repulsed in all their attempts to smash the Confederate stone wall. Finally they were routed, as Kirby Smith and his Virginians raced across the plateau and captured the Federal batteries of Griffin and Ricketts. Ricketts was desperately wounded, but lived to become a general.

With the loss of the Federal batteries, the battle was lost.

However, it was not quite the end. Federal troops again poured onto the plateau, this time the Fifth and Eleventh Massachusetts and the First Michigan. In a gallant charge, they drove back the Confederates and retook the Griffin and Ricketts artillery.

They were not to have them long.

Dr. Freeman read from a report written by Stonewall Jackson.

"At 3:30 p. m." wrote Jackson, "the enemy's position was such as to call for the use of the bayonet. I called for the charge."

Dr. Freeman looked at his watch.

"In a few minutes," he said, "it will be 3:30 and we will see whether history is repeated."

On the stroke of 3:30—75 years to the minute—the charge was made. The stone wall dissolved and Confederates poured down the plateau, and, after a series of charges and counter charges, drove the tenacious Sherman and his Yankees from the field. Off in the distance, Stuart's cavalry could be seen galloping in to further harrass them.

And then the rebel yell arose from the grandstand.

The battle in '61 took place on Sunday. In the rain next day, the fleeing Federal troops poured into Washington across the Long Bridge—"baffled, humiliated nad panic-struck," as Walt Whitman wrote.

Dr. J. E. Ament, Seminary Head, Is Dead in N. Y.

Dr. James E. Ament, 72, president of National Park Seminary for the past 20 years and widely known as an educator, architect, farmer and banker, died yesterday in Doctors' Hospital, New York. Death followed an operation Monday.

At his bedside were his wife, Mrs. Teresa Welch Ament, and two nieces, Anastasia and Jane Henderson.

Dr. Ament had been in poor health for several months, becoming ill last May. He recovered sufficiently to officiate at the annual commencement exercises at the seminary, but afterward suffered a relapse He went to New York last Wednesday to enter the hospital.

Headed Teachers Colleges.

Before accepting the presidency of the seminary he had headed State teachers colleges in Oklahoma, Missouri and Pennsylvania.

Dr. Ament was born in Woodburn, Ill., September 2, 1863. He was a great-grandson of Thomas Metcalf, United States Senator and tenth Governor of Kentucky.

He was graduated from Illinois Normal School in 1892, received his LL.D. from Transylvania University in 1906 and his Ph.D. from Oskaloosa College in 1914. In 1889 he married Teresa Catherine Welch, of Howe Island, Canada.

For a time he was superintendent of schools at Carrol, Iowa, and Rock Island, Ill. Later he became president of the State Teachers College at Alva, Okla., and also designed the school buildings.

Dr. Ament went from Oklahoma to Warrensburg, Mo., to head the State Teachers College in that State. He afterward took the presidency of the State Teachers College at Indiana, Pa.

From 1902 to 1904 he inspected secondary and collegiate schools in England, Scotland, France, Germany and Switzerland, and also studied university administration in this country.

In 1916 Dr. Ament was elected president for life of National Park Seminary at Forest Glen, Md. He initiated a building program on the campus, designing new structures and remodeling old ones.

Body to Lie in State.

It was recalled last night that when the present recreation hall was built, the contractor considered it impossible to carry out Dr. Ament's design. Dr. Ament, convinced his recommendations were feasible, went ahead with the construction, superintending the actual work himself.

In this hall that he designed and built, his body probably will lie in state until burial.

Fire Insurance Rate Cut in Hagerstown

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., July 21.—A one-third reduction in Hagerstown's fire deficiency charge, effective as of July 16, was announced today by the Middle Department Rating Association, which fixes fire insurance rates for this area. The reduction is from 15 cents to 10 cents on each $100 value, and applies to all fire insurance in standard companies on mercantile buildings and their contents, except sprinklered buildings and those of fireproof construction.

It is estimated by local insurance men that the reduction in the rate will save Hagerstown business men $15,000 annually.

The reduction was made after city departments adopted recommendations of the rating association for the keeping of records, checking of fire hydrants, etc.

Whereas the city had the highest rate in Maryland before today's announced reduction, it now has the lowest outside of Baltimore.

Columbia Will Release Great List of Films

Company Announces Year's Product and Expansion of Studio Space.

Columbia Pictures Corporation, which long since has taken its place among the most successful of the cinema's major producing organizations has released its 1936-37 year book—a handsome volume of illuminated announcements of forthcoming product—and approaches the impending season "with genuine pride and great confidence," a point of view which seems eminently justified by present and promised accomplishment.

Division Manager Sam A. Galanty, with headquarters in Washington, amplifies the terse commentaries of his company's colorful brochure in the following words:

"Frank Capra is now undertaking his most ambitious effort and has already expended in excess of $1,600,000.00 in the production of James Hilton's fantastic story, "Lost Horizon." Robert Riskin, ace scenarist, again is teamed with Frank Capra and has handled the adaptation of this remarkable novel. We safely predict that Ronald Colman will achieve in this vehicle, greater importance than even this most sought-after star ever has known. We are certain that in "Lost Horizon" we will bring to the screen a picture destined to capture the fancy of the world.

"Irene Dunne, famous star of 'Showboat' and "Magnificent Obsession,' is now at our studios beginning work on her first picture for our company—'Theodora Goes Wild.' This important production will be made on an elaborate scale, with cast, production and presentation on a par with the magnitude of this delightful personality.

"Bing Crosby shortly goes into production in a musical laugh show tentatively titled 'Pennies From Heaven.' America's feminine hearts will beat in rhythm with the voice of 'Bing' in this musical laugh show about a vagabond troubadour roaming the open road.

Pulitzer Prize Play.

"'Craig's Wife,' George Kelly's Pulitzer Prize play, is now in production with an all-star cast, headed by John Boles and Rosalind Russell.

"Grace Moore will shortly go into production in a story especially written by Rupert Hughes, titled "A Nightingale Flies Home."

"We are delighted to announce the signing of a contract with one of Hollywood's finest—Gregory La Cava—whose record of achievement forecasts an even more brilliant future. You will recall his fine success in "She Married Her Boss" with Claudette Colbert.

Herbert Marshall and Dolores Del Rio, appealing personalities, will prove a vital addition to our program.

"Jean Arthur, who has won the right to stardom, will be co-starred with Joel McCrea heading an important cast in their first film for the season—"Adventure in Manhattan."

"Junior League" by Clarence Budington Kelland, author of the current sensation "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town" is being readied for Jean Arthur's second vehicle.

"Valley Forge" the inspiring Theater Guild play by Maxwell Anderson, will again give Frank Capra an opportunity to present a majestic story on the screen. This Pulitzer Prize winner will prove truly a great American epic.

"Measured by any standard, Columbia's new program will surpass in scope the most impressive production scale ever undertaken by the company.

"Hot from his triumph in 'Bullets and Ballots' will come Edward G. Robinson, directed by Marion Gering, in 'Thunder in the City.'

"For those who like their heroes to be of the real he-man type, we will have releases of Jack Holt, Charles Starrett and Bob Allen in a series of Zane Grey and Peter B. Kyne Stories.

Chevalier Coming Back.

"We feel we have selected a perfect role for Maurice Chevalier in 'The Beloved Vagabond.'

"The Belasco play, 'Woman of Glamour' is being readied on an elaborate scale for a great woman star who is to be announced later.

"Some of the personalities scheduled for appearance in our forthcoming program are Edward Arnold, Lional Stander, Leo Carrillo, Richard Dix, Walter Connolly, Edith Fellows, Marian Marsh, Mary Astor, Fay Wray, George Bancroft, Chester Morris, Edward Everett Horton, Robert Allen, Melvyn Douglas.

"Among the many story properties which will appear are: "City for Conquest," by Aben Kandel; "Secret Marriage," Kathleen Norris' recent Collier's magazine serial; "Birth of a Hero," Alice Duer Miller story which appeared in the Cosmopolitan magazine; "The Way of an Eagle," from the world-read novel and stage success by Ethel M. Dell; "Golden Honeymoon," Ring Lardner's recent Cosmopolitan magazine story; "Cavalier of Tennessee," novel by Meredith Nicholson, which recently appeared as a serial in Cosmopolitan magazine. The true story of America's battling President, Andrew Jackson, taken from the most dramatic pages of American history; "There Goes the Bride," from the story by Octavus Roy Cohen, featuring Chester Morris and Fay Wray in a romantic comedy by this famous Saturday Evening Post author.

Plant Is Enlarged.

"Of great additional importance is the huge expansion program now under way in our studios. The newest scientific contrivances and the largest and most extensively equipped studios in our history, will give us a plant that rivals the finest in the world. More than 50,000 square feet of sound-proof space has recently been added.

"Great importance is being paid to the production of short subjects, and a diversified line of single and two-reel shorts will be produced.

"If great stories, brilliant directors, outstanding personalities and intelligent treatment is the vital formula for great pictures, then we have left nothing undone to bring about success.

"If this announcement appears lengthy, particularly at this hot season of the year, then you can readily appreciate what enthusiasm there must have been to prompt it."

About The Showshops

THESE are parlous days around Loew's Fox Theater. What with the new name contest for the theater in full swing, "Spring Is Here" being rehearsed by both cast and chorus, against the opening of the new bill on Friday, and a great deal still to be done in the matter of staging the fourth annual "Going Native" revue, the loewcal Loew executives are not sure whether they are going or coming, but think maybe the answer is "yes!"

BELL.

There are still a few good openings left on the "Going Native" roster for aspiring young dancers who wish to qualify for places in the chorus. In the neighborhood of a dozen girls already have been accepted for the merry-merry, but Gene Ford, in charge of production, is anxious to round up a few more who can both sing and dance. Applicants, 18 years of age and over, are urged to present themselves for audition in the rehearsal room on the third floor of the Columbia Theater Building, Twelfth and F streets, at noon on Saturday.

Over and above the essential consideration of cast and chorus, Mr. Ford also is in the market for some well-known, local "name," to act in the capacity of master of ceremonies for the home-town revue to be staged at the Fox the week of August 14. This post in past years has been filled successfully by such resident celebrities as Brooke Johns, Arthur Godfrey and Arch McDonald. If you are the guy, give Mr. Ford a ring.

Announcement of the complete cast and chorus of "Going Native" is expected to be made next Monday or Tuesday.

* * * *

Ernest Truex and his associates in the cast and chorus of "Spring Is Here," the musical comedy to be presented on the Fox stage this Friday, have been rehearsing so diligently in the comparatively airtight, bandbox "theater" on the sixth floor of the backstage structure of the playhouse that Manager Gene Ford last evening gave them a few hours respite by taking the whole caboodle of them down the river on the Wilson Line moonlight excursion, by way of snatching a breath of fresh air and a piece of breeze. The party, including as many of the drayma desks as could make the grade, left the Seventh street wharf at 8:30 and was back to the grind again before midnight.

* * * *

Since the matter of auditions has come up, it should not be left unsaid that today at 1:45 p. m. Benny Davis, whose "Star Dust Revue" is providing the current week's stage entertainment at the Earle Theater, will hold semiprivate auditions of eight of the most promising of Joe Brown's juvenile artists in the Brown Studios at 1210 G street. The drama editors of the local press have been invited to sit in as judges of the competition for Mr. Davis' professional favor.

The youthful singers and dancers to be heard are Myrtle Harding, torch singer; Frank Cady, "king of the air;" Iris O'Brien, Jerry Ralston, youngest of the Capital's torch singers, who also dances; Louise Levy and Ruth McCullough, both singers and dancers, the latter known as "queen of the blues;" Jean Duncan, one of the successful candidates for the chorus of "Going Native," and Irene Meitzler, sister of Marian Meitzler, winner of a recent radio contest over Station WRC.

It will mean something for Benny Davis to pick a star or two out of this double quartet of youngsters, trained in the Joe Brown technique. Benny has discovered some of the most gifted artists now decorating the American stage, among them Ruby Keeler, Eleanor Powell, Ruth and Buddy Ebsen, Little Jackie Heller and scores of others.

* * * *

This Joe Brown fellow is no tyro at the game, either. One of Washington's foremost dancers a decade or two ago, Joe developed as fine a type of "Frisco" hoofing and clowning as any local performer could boast. It was so good, in fact, that it carried him to New York and the "big time," where he clicked for years. Returning to the Capital, Joe dedicated his talent and experience to the practical stage training of ambitious amateurs of all ages, from the cradle almost to the final family plot. At present he has some 200 youngsters under his direction, all of them pointed toward careers on the stage, in pictures or over the air—or all three, if they have what it takes. Some of them have proved to have exactly that. Emanuel Genaro, winner of a recent "Bobby Breen contest," was a Brown student and Baby Gay Hess and Phyllis Jean Woodward both have graduated from the G street studios to Hollywood. No use overlooking our own Ned Wayburns when they bob up from time to time.

* * * *

And speaking of "going to school," if that is what we have been doing, the members of the Columbia Players, one of Washington's foremost resident acting groups, are attending three classes a week in the various branches of the theater. On Tuesdays, they have an hour's class in speech and voice work, under the tutelage of Frank Westbrook, of the Studio of Theater Arts. Following that class, they have an hour or more in makeup, under the direction of their own Betty Clark and Edgar Kloten. On Friday nights, there is a class in eurythmics with Judy Leith, well-known Washington dancer.

In addition to all this admirable pursuit of knowledge of the divergent theater crafts, the Columbians are busy with their play-reading and home work, looking to the coming of the 1936-37 acting season.

Like the postman who goes for a walk, on their off nights they while away the time visiting all the summer theaters within driving distance of the Capital.

* * * *

On Thursday night of this week, if the neighbors do not complain of the hilarious rehearsals in the meantime, the drama committee of the Arts Club of Washington will present what it is pleased to term a "Midsummer Night's Entertainment." The first half of the program will consist of the comedy, "Helena's Husband;" the second part of selected comedy scenes from Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night." All very funny and strictly hot-weather pastiming.

"Willie" Wilcox's Seco Theater, out in Silver Spring, Md., picked itself a pretty good double-feature bill, too:

"TRIAL BY JURY." The Estelle Wentworth Opera Group presents, under the auspices of the Community Center Department, the operetta in one act with book by Sir William S. Gilbert and music by Sir Arthur S. Sullivan, staged, directed and accompanied by Estelle Wentworth. Preceded by a concert by the Washington Civic Orchestra, under the direction of Samuel Paige Ford, a scene from Shakespeare's "The Taming of the Shrew," and Johnny Westbrook and His Guitar Entertainers. At the National Sylvan Theater. Reviewed Tuesday evening by W. A. Whitney.

—The Cast—

Judge	Ira Meyer
Plaintiff	Nina Norman
Counsel for Plaintiff	Richard Hill
Defendant	Ray Baine
Foreman of Jury	Walter Perry
Usher	Harry Yeide

Bridesmaids, Jurymen, and Spectators.

Bits of this and that, in music and theater, were woven into a charming potpourri of entertainment last evening at the National Sylvan Theater as some 7,500 witnessed the sixth of the 1936 summer festival programs.

As the piece de resistance was the Gilbert and Sullivan satire on judicial procedure, "Trial by Jury." A one-act operetta, whose length is by no means indicative of its wealth of humor, sung and mimed, or of the abundance of tuneful ditties, this delightful fun-poking was given an enthusiastic interpretation.

With Hary Yeide, as the ushers Ira Meyer, as the judge, and Ray Baine, as the defendant—three decided favorites, if this "house" can be said to have favorites—with charming Nina Norman, as the defendant; Walter Perry, as the foreman of the jury, and Richard Hall, as the counsel for the plaintiff, the group once again scored a hit for themselves and for Estelle Wentworth, whose direction and accompaniment drew from the work a high degree of entertainment.

Shakespeare Also Scores.

Presenting an early scene from "The Taming of the Shrew," Hester Walker Beall, Clarence W. Moore, Forney Reese and Francis Crane, respectively, at Katharine, Petruchio, Baptista and the music master, gave the Shakespearean excerpt an effective reading. Mrs. Beall, who directed the scene, deserves especial commendation.

Opening the program, the Washington Civic Orchestra, under the leadership of Samuel Paige Ford, presented the overture to "Merry Wives of Windsor" (Nicolae), "Tarantella" (Bohm), "From India" suite (Poppy), and selections from "Cavalleria Rusticana" (Mascagni). It was a nicely played concert.

The histronic parts of the program were separated by Johnny Westbrook and His Guitar Entertainers, playing such popular numbers as "Dream of Love," "Ten Tiny Toes," "Song of the Islands," "The Glory of Love" and "China Boy."

Father Divine to Hold Rally Despite Protest

Los Angeles, July 21 (AP).—Serene despite fierce opposition, Pacific Coast "kingdoms" of Father Divine, colored mystic, moved ahead tonight with plans to hold a convention in the famous Hollywood Bowl.

They have leased the bowl for meetings starting July 31. Recently petitions were circulated by former Judge P. E. Gardner, religious lecturer and writer, demanding that the lease be rescinded.

Uniform Price Plan for Capital Milk Assailed

Fairfax Independent Says Producers Are on Verge of Bankruptcy.

The second day of hearings on a proposed milk marketing agreement for the Washington area ended yesterday in a battle of words between the opponents—independent and organized dairymen.

The proposal suggested by the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association and proposing a uniform price of 26½ cents per gallon of basic milk, was first attacked by Dr. F. W. Huddleson, Fairfax County treasurer and independent dairyman.

Pointing out that independent producers could not be assured of receiving the suggested rate, Dr. Huddleson accused officials of the producers' association of forcing independents to join the organization in order to secure better prices.

Scores Arguments.

He scored arguments that a marketing agreement would protect the producer and stabilize the market.

"This proposed agreement," Dr. Huddleson said, "will not help the producer or stabilize the market. It's for the benefit of an association that sees its future doomed unless the strong arm of the Government comes to its aid."

Huddleson resigned in protest from the association last January. He contended that the Washington milk shed covers too large a territory and that farmers on nearby high-priced land cannot compete with dairymen on cheap land in West Virginia and Pennsylvania.

Donald Montgomery, consumers' counsel of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, who with other AAA officials is conducting the hearings, said he would oppose the proposed agreement if it meant elimination of the source of low-cost milk.

"Consumers want low milk prices to continue and unless it can be shown the present setup is unsatisfactory, I will oppose Government control of the producers," he declared.

Predicts Rising Prices.

But a renewed prediction, that of rising prices, was made at this point by Dr. Huddleson.

"Unless we get relief by a higher price," he said, "the farmers are going to go like firecrackers—snap, snap, snap. A number of dairymen in my county are on the verge of bankruptcy. Some of them haven't paid their 1934 taxes. Many of them have 50 per cent farm loans and 75 per cent commission loans. Many of them are at a point where their credit is exhausted at the bank. We've got to have a change."

Farmers throughout the crowded Agriculture Department auditorium rose one by one to tell of drought conditions and rising production costs in their communities. It was agreed that crop conditions are the "worst in years" and hay, grain and feed prices are rapidly mounting.

Yesterday's session was devoted almost entirely to bitter verbal battles between warring factions on both sides. Independents hurled accusations at association members and they in turn countered with heated debate. Sessions will resume this morning.

Electrified Home To Be Open Today

The home of J. M. Hughes, which is an electrical Utopia, will be opened to the public today.

Farmer Hughes' farm, located near Dranesville, on the Leesburg pike, has been converted into a spiderweb of wires by the Rural Electrification Commission, which is making an electrical appliance model out of the erstwhile old and rambling farmhouse.

Every electrical device for the home and farmland—from gadgets for kidding hens into laying more eggs to electrical fly-swatters and drinking fountains for cattle—have been installed.

Their report, received in Moscow by wireless, was timed 6:45 p. m. (11:45 a. m., E. S. T.). Pilots Chekaloff, Baidukoff and Navigator Beliakoff took off from Moscow early yesterday en route to Chita, Siberia.

Raymond Ditmar, head of the New York Zoo, will give an illustrated lecture in December. David Seabury, psychologist, will be here in January to be followed by Clarence Little in February.

Rex Little Recks What's Behind Him!

So intent upon the sport of aquaplaning is this 4-year-old German shepherd that he apparently has no thought of the lovely young creature serving as his ballast. She happens to be Arnette Webster, 21-year-old girl athlete, whose pulchritude and daring add to the excitement of the water carnival currently being presented as part of the ocean front entertainment at Atlantic City. Rex is the only professional aquaplaning dog in the world, it is claimed, and was trained by his owner, Lieut. Comdr. F. W. Sterling, U. S. N., retired, in charge of the carnival. Who wouldn't be a serf to the surf under conditions such as these?

2 Weeks' 'Stay' Is Granted Dog Called Vicious

By the Associated Press.

Brockport, N. Y., July 21.—Idaho, shaggy part Airedale, part Shepherd dog, romped in a big enclosure of the Rochester Dog Protective Association today, secure for two more weeks from proceedings seeking his destruction as a dangerous animal.

Townfolk crowded Justice of the Peace Homer D. Benedict's small office and sweltered for nearly two hours while half a score of witnesses testified for and against Idaho.

Although the hearing was held on the complaint of Daniel Houghton that the dog leaped on him while he was swimming and bit his neck, most of the testimony concerned the dog's alleged part in the drowning of Maxwell Breeze, 14, July 4.

Hearing Adjourned.

Benedict adjourned the hearing for two weeks at the request of Miss Mary Foubister, executive secretary of the dog association.

Idaho's 22-year-old master—Victor Fortune—asked to have him placed under Miss Foubister's observation last night.

Miss Foubister testified the dog appeared to be affectionate and playful and was entitled to the two weeks' observation required by law before an animal is adjudged vicious.

Donald Duff, first of three lads who were present at the fatal swimming party, identified Idaho as the dog which he said followed the party from the village to the canal a short distance away. He said Breeze was about 10 feet from shore when the dog jumped in and swam toward him.

Boy Got Frightened.

"What did the dog do to Max?" asked Benedict.

"Just tried to climb on Max's back," replied Duff.

"Was Max playing with the dog before he (Max) went into the water?"

"No."

"What did Max do?"

"He got frightened and swam out toward the middle and hollered 'The dog's after me. Help.'"

"What happened then?"

"Paul Hamlin swam out to help but the dog tried to climb on him and when he (Hamlin) tried to shake him off Max went down and Paul couldn't get him."

Methods of bandaging, control of bleeding, care of wounds, treatment of shock, fainting, sun-stroke and the prone-pressure method of resuscitation will be taught by Mrs. Gertrude Cummings, an Army graduate nurse and a qualified Red Cross Instructor.

Police Protect Drivers In Milk Workers' Strike

Nashville, Tenn., July 21 (AP).—Trucks of two milk companies made deliveries under police escort today while union spokesmen reiterated wage and hour demands for driver-salesmen of one concern and disclaimed connection with the strike of workers at the other.

Saying they had nothing to do with a strike call to drivers of the Jersey Milk Co., the union men declared, however, for a nine-hour day, $30 a week and official recognition of Nashville Pure Milk Co. workers.

Specialist Assigned.

R. W. Farrell has been appointed chief specialist of the Thomas scalp specialists offices in Washington, Paul A. Thomas, president of the company, announced yesterday. Farrell formerly was the head of the company's office in Buffalo.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Reviewing Stand.

Detroit, July 21.—In the acres of factories that go to make up the empire of Ford, there are laboratories devoted to the reclamation of waste products . . . But the laboratory where a real test was made of the extent to which waste can be salvaged is in the Ford produce gardens, where workers are allotted acres of ground to grow vegetables . . . In charge of the gardens is Kid McCoy, former ring champion, who was taken from San Quintin by Mr. Ford, because he believed McCoy could be turned to useful account . . . It was in 1934 that Kid McCoy turned up at the huge local plant, patrolled by Harry Bennett in charge of personnel . . . In 1936, it can be stated flatly that the experiment has worked out successfully . . . If Henry Ford had done nothing but give this man a chance to fight his way back, recapture his place in society, I think he would have justified his existence on this curious old planet . . . Here was one laboratory experiment that was the real McCoy.

CLARK GABLE.

One of the great vaudeville favorites is the veteran, Joe Jackson, who has been doing his tramp bicycle act on American stages for the past 20 years.

* * * *

. . . I saw him here the other night, at the Fox Theater, and his "timing" was something to marvel at, high art concealed in a scarecrow costume . . . It is a difficult act to project, for the entire plot is the reaction of a tramp who finds a bicycle . . . Twenty years ago, when bicycles were in flower, it must have been easier for Jackson to register the thought . . . Twenty years later, when America has switched from bicycles to automobiles, Jackson still scores heavily, and that is the proof of real art . . . He is still making a nice revenue, $750 a week . . . Jackson wastes no motions, never overacts . . . Invariably, he is a terrific comedy hit, and even at the Radio City Music Hall, his pantomime stopped the show cold.

Jackson is a member of the diminishing band of headliners who once toured the country . . . Thurston was another . . . He is of the same breed as Walter Huston, Walter C. Kelly, Pat Rooney, Sophie Tucker, Harry Houdini, Jim Barton . . . The appearance of any of these grand troupers in a town was an event of real importance, a guarantee of excellent entertainment, with a dash of sentiment for coloring . . . But times have changed and the ranks have been decimated, thinned out . . . from the American scene, because it is tragic that they are passing they brought a lot of merriment into a lot of lives.

Radio and motion pictures have altered the theatrical scene . . . The new generation of theatergoers is radio-minded.

* * * *

For instance, Artie Auerbach, who works on the Phil Baker program, only has to say "Hello Skeeper," and the audience in a theater cracks out in heavy applause . . . They recognize the phrase from hearing it over the radio, and the recognition is spontaneous and immediate . . . The answer is that Amos 'n' Andy still are the greatest box office attractions . . . When they make personal appearances, which is rarely, people come from a radius of 50 miles, turn the entire day into a picnic . . . Turn loose a Clark Gable in vaudeville theaters, and the local police departments must be called out to preserve order . . . Eddie Cantor goes into houses that are happy to hit $20,000 in a week, and swells the gross to $40,000.

New Study Begun By Amelia Earhart

Los Angeles, July 21 (AP).—Amelia Earhart Putnam projected herself today into a comparatively new phase of aviation—an exhaustive study of "human reactions to flying."

In the race for mechanical perfection of aeronautics, the psychological factor has been largely neglected, she explained.

She wants to determine the effects, upon varying individuals, of speed, altitude, pressure, fatigue, mechanical aids and other conditions of flying.

Miss Earhart's ambitions may be realized in an aviation research project she will undertake this fall for Purdue University, Lafayette, Ind., financed by a $50,000 foundation fund.

She went aloft today for the first time in the big Lockheed electra all-metal monoplane she will use in her research.

Workers Fight Fire.

Newberry, Mich., July 21 (AP).—Conservation and forestry officials threw 1,000 workers about a Schoolcraft County forest fire today and the fighters reported progress in the battle tonight. The blaze had covered a 2,500-acre area.

Workers fighting a blaze in 700 acres along the north bank of the Tahquamenon River reported today they had it fairly well in check.

Actress Falls in Stream.

Hollywood, July 21 (AP).—Katharine Hepburn fell into a mountain stream and was dashed over big bowlders today before members of a camera crew could rescue her. Miss Hepburn was to drive a small cart across a ford of the stream in "Portrait of a Rebel." The current was too strong and the cart tipped over.

Watching Filming.

Hollywood, July 21.

Walter Huston, Ruth Chatterton and Paul Lukas are playing a scene for the flicker "Dodsworth." Director William Wyler sits in his chair next to the camera and watches as Huston, the husband, confronts Chatterton, his wife, and her lover, Lukas.

JEAN HARLOW.

Huston tells them that he knows what has going on; that she can have a divorce if she prefers Lukas. It is a nice scene, at high tension, and after both Huston and Chatterton have had their say, Lukas speaks. "Don't forget," says Lukas, "Shakespeare's Othello ended badly for the hero." He is trying to frighten Huston.

* * * *

Huston answers: "I'm not Othello." It is rather odd to hear Walter Huston say this on the set, for the next season he will be seen on the Broadway stage as Othello.

* * * *

The new edition of the flicker "Gold Diggers" is now facing the camera, with Lloyd Bacon directing, and featuring those typical gold diggers Joan Blondell and Glenda Farrell. Dick Powell is the hero.

The story on the set this day, however, is not any of the stars. The yarn is a man, practically unnoticed in the crowd, who is playing only a small part. He will sing a chorus of a comedy song in the flicker.

* * * *

* * * *

Jean Harlow, William Powell and Spencer Tracy are doing a scene for the flicker "Libeled Lady." Director Jack Conway has watched a number of rehearsals, and he says: "Now, we'll shoot it."

Tracy is a newspaper editor, Powell is employed by the paper to get it out of libel suits, and Miss Harlow is the woman in the case. Powell, in this sequence, is to pretend that he is married to Jean Harlow. She is really Tracy's gal friend, and is only doing this as a favor to him. Tracy says to Miss Harlow: "He's your bridegroom for an hour." She answers: "That's too long for me."

Powell says to Miss Harlow: "Don't forget, you're Mrs. William Chandler." She answers: "I'd just as soon have a number."

The Federal Diary

By Betty Read.

Texas is calling for rare fish specimens from the United States Bureau of Fisheries and the problem is how to get them there by airplane.

As an adjunct to the Centennial Exhibition at Dallas, the municipal aquarium requested the Bureau to lend it, for the duration of the Exhibition, some albino trout and some delicate and colorful tropical fish. The Bureau is willing to do so, said the chief clerk, Miss Flossie White, but in the torrid summer weather the problem is one of transportation. At first the regular means of the tanks in Pullman cars was considered, but as the fish the Bureau is sending are rare, they decided not to take the chance on the long and hot journey.

So now it has been decided that the fish will have their first airplane trip—probably not many in the world can boast that they have swum through the air many feet above the ground. That is settled, but how to air-condition the plane still is to be decided. One of the methods under consideration is to put an old-fashioned collander filled with ice in the top of each galvanized tank and let it slowly drip into the water, thereby supplying both chill and oxygen. Or if there is a really cool spell reported from southern areas, the fish will be rushed aboard a plane and taken to their air-conditioned temporary homes in the Dallas aquarium.

Policemen from Maine to California and from Florida to the State of Washington are represented at the third session of the National Police Academy of the Federal Bureau of Investigation which opened on Monday. Among the 35 selected to study Uncle Sam's crime detection and law enforcement methods for three months of hard school work is J. W. Hernandez, of the Puerto Rico Insular Police Department.

The school began its first session just about a year ago to train representatives of local and State police organizations in the ways of the G-Men. Its purpose is to afford the knowledge of the Federal men to other police organizations, stressing the fact that they are to return to their own groups as teachers.

The special report on the reorganization of the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation is almost ready, reports Malcolm Kerlin, administrative assistant to Commerce Secretary Roper. The committee to look over the work of the bureau and make recommendations for changes and improvements was appointed a few weeks ago by the Secretary, and upon his return from Europe next month he will find the report on his desk. Just how sweeping the recommendations will be has not been disclosed. Those on the committee include the present head of the bureau, Joseph B. Weaver; Capt. George Fried, supervising inspector of the bureau in New York and hero of a number of thrilling sea rescues; Capt. William Fischer, supervising inspector for the bureau in San Francisco, and Prof. Edward Seward, of the U. S. Shipping Board Bureau.

The Postoffice Department is rather deserted by its big-wigs these days for many of the officials are away, either on business or vacation. Despite the fact that the payless leave of absence for Postmaster General James A. Farley does not begin until August 1, he has been away from Washington for several weeks and is not expected back this month, except, perhaps, for a hurried visit.

The solicitor of the department, Karl A. Crowley, is flying over Central and South America right now inspecting possibilities for developing new air routes to these countries and looking over the present air routes. The schedule between New York, Florida, Latin-America and South America was speeded up considerably this month and Crowley was assigned the job of seeing what future possibilities for air transport of mail over that section may be.

And the Second Assistant Postmaster General, Harllee Branch, is having his vacation before he steps into a more responsible job when Branch's leave goes into effect.

Perhaps, because of all the absentees, the new stamp series of the Army and Navy has been filed away for future reference although it was originally scheduled to come out in August. The Army and Navy submitted folios of their best photographs for use on the stamps, but as the Postmaster General and the President have to approve the selection and O. K. the design for the stamp the matter has been tucked out of sight.

But one thing is certain, they say at the department, and that is that there will be no special stamp issued in commemoration of Frederick Douglas, the Negro who was prominent some years ago in Washington political circles. There had been rumors of such a stamp, but the department said the only special stamps still to be issued and as yet unannounced are the Army and Navy series.

Today is the last one of examinations for the thousands of applicants taking Civil Service examinations for stenographer and typist. For most of the month the tests have been going on at the McKinley High School and in all about 16,000 men and women of Washington have taken them in order to be placed on the Civil Service lists, if they pass successfully. This is the largest number ever to apply for these Government jobs in Washington, while the number all over the country is also a record, being nearly 82,000.

The commission yesterday declared it had never run smoother examinations—and this in spite of the fact that the thermometer hit 104 for two days in succession while the gymnasium of the school was crowded with would-be Government employes.

Col. Charles I. Stengel, executive assistant to the president of the American Federation of Government Employes, reports to the national headquarters here that the lodges throughout the middle and far west are increasing and holding active meetings. He is on an annual field trip of inspection and organization and is visiting those cities where the government employes have formed unions, affiliated with the A. F. G. E.

From Denver he wrote of the recent death of Mrs. Mattie J. Gledhill, president of the lodge there, who is well known throughout the Nation-wide group of Government workers. She has been a delegate to a number of national conventions and has visited some of the Washington lodges. Her son, Donald Gledhill, is the executive secretary of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences of Hollywood, prominent in the film world, and her sister, Mrs. Herbert C. Thompson, is of this city.

Winchester, Va., July 21.—Plans for a municipal swimming pool for this city have been requested by the WPA office in Richmond, it was learned today. City Manager Arthur M. Field said the plans will be forwarded as soon as they can be prepared. An application was made about a year ago for WPA funds. The cost of the pool would be approximately $20,000.

New Tri-Power 'Locarno' Talks Open Thursday

London Parley Preliminary to Security Discussion of Five Nations.

By the Associated Press.

London, July 21.—Diplomatic representatives of three powers decided tonight to begin reconstruction of European security Thursday.

Great Britain, France and Belgium are to meet at London for a "preliminary" Locarno discussion in an effort to bolster the mutual security agreements which collapsed last March when German troops goose-stepped into the Rhineland.

Although only representatives of the three powers will attend the session, diplomats of Germany and Italy will be kept informed of the progress of the discussions.

Other Nations Informed.

Agreement for the tripower parley was reached at a conference between British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and the French and Belgian ambassadors.

Eden later told German and Italian charge d'affaires of the conditions under which the diplomats were to assemble.

His statements were emphasized in the House of Commons by Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin who asserted the prospective meeting was only "preliminary" to a later conference of the five original Locarno powers, planned for either just before the September League of Natoins assembly meeting or just afterward.

This larger discussion, attended by the five nations was expected in informed quarters to delve into the problems of widenng European security, possibly including among other subjects a review of Adolph Hitler's peace suggestions.

(The German proposals arose early last April as a Nazi answer to earlier suggestion formulated at London by Britain, France, Belgium and Italy. Included among them was a suggestion for an international peace conference to consider many of the existing diplomatic questions of Europe together with the German denunciation of the Locarno pact.)

Eden and Lord Halifax, Lord privy seal, are expected to head the British delegation at the meeting beginning Thursday.

Culbertson on Bridge

Zoological Note.

I don't know whether it is true that the ostrich buries its head in the sand to "hide" from the hunters, but I do know that many bridge players are fond of that means of defense.

The "ostrich" player is a chronic buck-passer. Whenever his side is in danger he figuratively puts his head into the sand and prays for a miracle, and this regardless of the fact that a clear course of action is open to him! His poor partner has to guess, when his turn comes, whether the ostrich's inaction denotes satisfaction or petrification.

There is nothing extreme in North's pass in today's hand. Thousands do that sort of thing every day. But it is definitely wrong, especially against a good pair like the East-West combination below.

North, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 heart	Double
Pass	Pass	Pass

North should have foreseen the danger of a penalty pass by East. His correct bid was two clubs. Nothing much could happen as long as he had so solid a seven card suit. And, in a pinch, the suit could be rebid.

East had to choose between a possible game at spades and a reasonably sure profit at one heart doubled. His decision in favor of the latter was correct.

Poor South knew he had an ostrich as a partner. But what could he do? He passed, hoping the slaughter would not be too severe.

West properly opened the three of trumps. The penalty pass screams from the housetops, 99 times in 100, "lead a trump!" East felt a little worried, since the three might be West's only trump, but deciding to play him for three or four to an honor, East won with the ace of trumps and returned the four.

The false card deceived South, who had not yet recovered from the shock he received when the dummy went down. He put up the ten, hoping to force out the king or win the trick. West won with the jack and continued the suit. East took the king of trumps and forced South knew only too well why there had been such a rush to take out the trumps. With nearly all the top cards in the deck, East and West were willing to play the hand as though it were no trump. They were anxious to prevent South from using any of his trumps for ruffing.

His last chance was a spade ruff. But East got in on the second spade round and took out the last trump. From then on it was a shambles. South barely managed to make a diamond trick in addition to the spade and heart, a set of 700 points.

Had North bid two clubs the opponents might have gone to game in spades or no trump, but that would have been a few hundred points short of 700. And North could not be badly hurt at clubs. In fact, seven tricks could be made with ease.

Numbers Are Often Useful.

While the Townsendites have been filling the air with much revolving talk of their revolving pension plan, the Social Security Board has been grappling with the formidable details of operating a practicable Nation-wide pension system. Now, after nearly a year of preparation, the wheels of its complicated organization are about to start turning.

Announcement has been made that registration of the 30,000,000 workers eligible for old-age retirement will begin "not later than November 15." Cynics add to this, "and not before November 3," believing that there is political design in delaying until after the election consideration of pensions and the taxes they will involve. A fairer view would consider the enormity of the administrative task and would question only whether the Social Security Board really expects to be entirely ready for it by November.

To register 30,000,000 voters for an election requires protracted effort by well-organized political and municipal organizations. Having no such machinery to begin with, the Social Security Board must duplicate this accomplishment as a beginning and, thereafter, so identify each registrant that he may be recognized on their records throughout a lifetime, no matter where in the country he may present himself.

To do this a numerical system will of course be installed. This, too, stirs criticism from those who have no distaste for holding registered bonds, life insurance policies or numbered bank books. Regardless of the specific merits or demerits of the Federal social security act, the only practicable method of keeping millions of individual pension accounts straight is by numbering them. It has as much connection with regimentation as the street address which enables the postman to deliver mail.

Goodbye Mr. Alger!

In the days when book-buying was more on the cafeteria order of selection than the automat method of purchasing through book clubs, happy endings and success stories had the most appeal. Today psychoanalysts call this type of reading "escape literature". But in the past, it was simply a case of art imitating nature. An author had only to glance around to find a potential Rockefeller in every "news butcher," calling his wares to train-weary passengers, and a future grande dame in every chorus girl.

Now, according to reports, the Erie train boy is fast disappearing from our railroads and chorus girls, instead of angling for millionaires, are studying stenography. The former is being supplanted by a "more dignified, tasteful and inoffensive method" of selling light literature, cigars, cigarettes and chocolates. The latter are being replaced by chorines who take typing as seriously as tapping.

The rails and boards will lose much of their glamor with the passing of these colorful gold-diggers—the "butcher" and the scheming chorine. Their departure may even usher in a new school of success story writers. Certainly it leaves imitators of Mr. Alger and Miss Loos far out on the literary limb.

The Dardanelles Agreement.

A victory for reason was celebrated by yesterday's march of Turkish troops into the formerly demilitarized zone along the Dardanelles. At a time when force is increasingly the arbiter in international relations it is reassuring to behold one outworn treaty changed by the orderly negotiation of its signatories. It would be more reassuring if one could be sure that there would have been the same outcome if Germany had not remilitarized the Rhineland. The willingness of France to listen to arguments for peaceful revision was a little late in its development.

One of Turkey's principal ambitions is thus achieved. She has regained sovereignty over the important straits which divide her territory. But, as is customary in compromise agreements, Turkey has been willing to give in order to receive.

According to the new treaty, the Angora government has the right to close the straits when she sees herself threatened by war. But before so doing, the Council of the League of Nations must be notified. If two-thirds of this body declare that they see no threat to Turkey's security, the straits must remain open.

This is a significant development in the field of international organization. In the vital field of self-defense it subordinates Turkish sovereignty to the judgment of the Council at Geneva. Coupled with the provision that warships acting under a League mandate may always pass through the straits, it indicates both the loyalty of Turkey as a League member, and the constructive arrangements which can be reached by negotiations undertaken in a spirit of mutual good will.

Politics In The CCC.

Campaign use will undoubtedly be made of the current admissions that political influence is a factor in the appointment of non-technical supervisors in the CCC. That, however, is the least significant aspect of the disclosures. Citizens who are interested in good government rather than partisan maneuvering will be more immediately concerned over the effects of that policy on the young men enrolled in this rehabilitation enterprise.

The CCC is probably the most popular of the Administration's so-called alphabetical agencies. It has won all but universal public approval not so much for the tangible work it has accomplished as for its salutary influence on thousands of young men who were being debased by involuntary idleness. To them it has offered healthful occupation, and opportunity to assist destitute members of their families, and improved prospect of restoration of normal employment. It is obvious to anyone that these advantages are seriously impaired if key positions in the organization are handed out as political plums.

There is no evidence to indicate that the enrolled personnel has been selected on a partisan basis. But officials of both the Departments of Agriculture and the Interior admit that from 20 to 25 per cent of the non-technical foremen are selected from a list of faithful partisans who have the indorsement of a Congressman and Mr. Farley. There are ample indications that those admissions are, if anything, understatement. In New Jersey, for example, State Forester Wilber asserts that no man could hope to obtain a job as non-technical foreman on a CCC project unless his name appears on "Jim Farley's list."

This sort of policy tends to place the CCC in the category of a Nazi labor camp instead of a constructive rehabilitation project for young men. Sponsors of the movement anticipated that supervisors' jobs would be left open to enrolled youths who had gained the requisite training and experience. In this way, deserved promotion would assist the building of morale and many young men would be better equipped to transfer to responsible private jobs. When foremen are chosen for their political affiliations, one chief objective of the conservation camps is only too clearly thwarted.

If the CCC is to retain the public support accorded it thus far, it must completely abandon any alliance with partisanship. That could be easily accomplished by a ruling providing that all supervisors be hired through the United States Employment Service when no suitable talent is available within the enlisted personnel. Such a course might require some courage in the midst of a political campaign, but the alternatives to showing courage in this matter are disastrous.

Already James E. Van Zandt, national commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and others are advocating military training for the CCC boys. Agitation for such degenerating changes in the nature and purpose of the conservation camps is certain to be accelerated if they are not kept rigidly free from the point of the spoils system. Indeed, the future of the CCC may be largely determined by the response of the Administration to the current charges that they are not altogether free from political influences.

Textile Organization.

The United Textile Workers, in co-operation with the Synthetic Yarn Workers, have decided to launch an organization drive inside the rayon industry without awaiting the outcome of the conflict between the Committee for Industrial Organization, with which they are affiliated, and the American Federation of Labor. Except as a diplomatic move, there is no special reason why the textile unions should mark time for the period of the Lewis-Green dispute, since in their case effective organization can proceed only along industrial lines.

Under any conditions serious difficulties confront organizers in the textile industries, where labor is predominantly unskilled or semi-skilled, with a large proportion of women employes. Low wages and fluctuating employment are further handicaps to unionization. When such workers are reasonably satisfied with their lot, they are not inclined to join unions. When conditions are bad, or when strikes threaten, mushroom organization may be facilitated. But it lacks the quality of permanence that makes the labor union an effective agency for bargaining and which should make it more of a guarantee for enduring industrial peace.

The fundamental weaknesses of the labor movement in mass production industries like textiles will never be overcome by organizing zeal alone. Indeed, the United Textile Workers have found in the past that the groups they sought to organize were inclined to follow the lead of radical spellbinders under emotional stress, only to lapse into indifference after adjustment of critical difficulties with their employers.

It will take a much better quality of leadership than any yet shown by the United Textile Workers to give coherence and permanence to the new unions which they propose to establish along industrial lines. But if they should succeed in their efforts, using their bargaining powers intelligently to elevate standards without making excessive or arbitrary demands, a great deal might be done toward stabilizing the textile industries. Exploitation of labor in certain sections has been partly responsible in the past for prolonged and costly local textile strikes. And it has also handicapped employers in parts of the country with no desire to see employment conditions kept at the subsistence level or below.

Both sides might benefit, therefore, by the spread of a well-directed unionization movement resolved to resist oppression, but conscious at the same time that demands must always be carefully accommodated to the capacity of the industry to carry them. The enforced liquidation of the famous Amoskeag plant, which once employed 15,000 workers, should be sufficient to point the moral.

At Topeka Tomorrow Night.

It is no exaggeration to say that Gov. Landon's speech tomorrow night, accepting the Republican nomination for the Presidency, will be one of the slightly important events of the year. The acceptance addresses of nominees for the office of Chief Executive are always of vital interest. In this case, however, there are a number of special considerations that will tend to enhance the significance of Mr. Landon's words.

Since the Democratic National Convention the campaigns of both parties have made little progress. Everyone has been waiting to hear from Gov. Landon. The Administration's case has been fully stated. President Roosevelt has concisely and clearly expressed his own point of view. But the contest cannot really move forward until the G. O. P. challenger has had an opportunity to join the issue. With the conclusion of his acceptance speech the 1936 Presidential race will be in full swing.

Interest in Gov. Landon's speech is not fully explained, however, by the mechanics of campaign procedure. The Kansan did not make an active pre-convention campaign. To millions of voters his views on some vital issues confronting the Nation are still unknown. His unassuming demeanor, his high regard for the "average citizen," his candor and, of course, his record as Governor of Kansas are now fairly well understood by the public. But the way in which Gov. Landon grapples with the truly momentous national issues in his first address as the Republican candidate will afford a much more adequate measure of his statesmanship.

Moreover, thoughtful citizens in both parties are eager to see how he will deal with various conflicting planks of the Republican platform. Every declaration intended to express the views of a great party composed of numerous diverse groups is likely to be general in terms and ambiguous in some particulars. It is Gov. Landon's task to adapt this general statement of principles to the needs of the country with the finesse of a national leader able to select what is best from the views of all his supporters.

At Cleveland the Republican Party was an aggregation of many elements moving uncertainly toward cohesion. Now that party has a leader who inevitably becomes the spearhead of its drive for popular support. In the ceremonies Thursday night will come the first major test of his ability to unite the various phases of the opposition to the present Administration.

Gov. Landon has already manifested his political courage by his telegram to the Cleveland convention, placing his own interpretation upon three of the planks there adopted. If his acceptance speech conveys the same determination to interpret the entire platform along progressive and intelligent lines, a large part of the dissatisfaction aroused by its inconsistencies will be eliminated. Attention will be diverted from the vague terms of some planks to the more precise views and principles of the man who, if elected, would be responsible for translating that platform into practical measures.

There are many indications that Gov. Landon is fully aware of the importance that will be attached to his words. Yet, it is said, he plans to speak as a citizen addressing his fellows, in terms that all of them may understand. If he succeeds in defining the really significant issues, clothing constructive thought in simple language, he will have played his part in opening an historic campaign.

The diploma you will receive from the school of experience will be inscribed on marble, but you won't be able to read it.

The Thesis Threat.

From the Saturday Review of Literature.

Unquestionably our American idea of democracy in education has many meritorious features, but it does make it possible for many persons who are ill-suited for scholarly pursuits to wear the scholar's gown. The question is where we should place the blame for the abuse of this democratic idea. Certainly, if we expect the teachers to protect us, we impose upon them a tremendous burden—a burden calling for the highest courage. This courage is needed to tell a young applicant for graduate work that he should abandon such plans.

If the teacher falters and allows the applicant to begin his work, even more courage will be required later to discourage the young person who has labored long hours in the library to collect all of the written wisdom about his chosen thesis, who has circulated innumerable questionnaires, who has burned untold quantities of electricity in copying long, phrases and arranging footnotes, and who has spent a good many dollars in having several copies of the completed thesis typed and bound. Discouragement, in the form of failing marks at this last stage, only condemns the youngster to more of the same kind of drudgery in order to produce more of the same worthless material.

Reaction To Coughlin.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In an editorial of July 17 you state that the newly formed third party at Cleveland will prove injurious to the re-election chances of President Roosevelt.

It seems to me the opposite is true. For every slimy epithet thrown in the President's direction by Coughlin & Co. there will be an additional increase of votes for his re-election in November.

I do not know whether to attribute your statement to poor psychological analysis, or was the wish the father of the thought?

A. RIFKIN.

Washington, July 17.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is distressing to hear a man of Father Coughlin's standing call the President of the United States a liar.

Father Coughlin is hurting himself and the cause he is fighting for far more than the President. Sound-thinking people do not like this rough-neck stuff and it does not become a Catholic priest to use it on the head of the Nation or any one else.

Father Coughlin or any man may take an opposing view from that of the President—that is his right—but in a sane manner with due respect for the President of the United States. The man who uses mud-slinging methods during this campaign is going to get a sound licking at the polls.

W. H. JEFFERY.

Washington, July 18.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With Americans fair play is an article of faith, and calling a man a liar who from the very prominence of his position is barred from retaliation in kind is, in its essence, the most cowardly act of which one can be guilty. This is markedly stressed in this instance because of the President's universally known lack of resentment, a characteristic which has for four years been rigidly and severely tested.

Our national dignity suffers from such incendiary attacks, and prior to admitting immigrants they should be impressed with that principle of our Government that differentiates between freedom of speech, and license to libel, and have hammered into their consciousness that liberty and libertinism are widely variant.

Work And Propaganda.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: These fairy stories about "wealthy gentlemen who have started at the bottom of the financial ladder and by dint of hard work and real use of their brains, have obtained their wealth and so are entitled and welcome to it," etc., etc., has been repeated, parrot-like, for so many times that it becomes tiresome. And there is very little truth behind it, once we analyze all sides.

When you go over this Nation with your eyes and ears open, and ascertain the number of automobiles, private yachts and homes possessed by the average family of the ruling class, you can readily see how absurd it is to believe for a moment that this class in society was ever "as poverty-stricken as are the vast majority of the people."

The rule is that he who works hard all his life, conscientiously, and does not exploit his fellow-men and women, using his brain as much as those in the ruling class, and certainly staying on his job with more faith and punctuality, gets exactly nowhere, as the result of a lifetime of labor. Why? Because he creates wealth that others confiscate from him by legalistic means, but nevertheless a form of robbery which is worse than straight stealing because done "under cover of law."

Productive workers and farmers in field, office or factory should do their own thinking and not take this predigested propaganda of the special interests seriously. Because it is all bunk! A. CHRISTIAN.

Washington, July 18.

Democratic Quarrels.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: You printed a readable article by Mr. Latham recently in The Post on "Doubtful Massachusetts" which serves to confute the Farley claim of 48 States for the New Deal. Curley has enjoyed only Barmecide feasts with the President who has no warmth for the senatorial ambitions of the Bay State Governor.

The feature of Latham's article is its concluding paragraph in which he defines Former Gov. Ely's influence in the State as negligible. Whether Ely appears negligible or nihil he was hired by the editor of a weekly paper with vast circulation to castigate the President's policy.

When all the quarrels brewing in the Democratic Party are counted it will be found that broken hearts will do their share in breaking lines and heads, leaving Big Jim to lead a donkey without a kick in him. The Cohalan's in New York, the Coughlinites in the great industrial centers and the old line party workers hateful of Ickes, Wallace and Perkins, are all sharpening their knives for a final thrust, fierce and fatal.

PETER G. DONFALLON.

Washington, July 14.

Diogenes To Aristotle.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Aristotle" of Alexandria is at it again. May I observe had it not have been for George Washington ordering the killing of men over a period of eight years, Aristotle would still be dead somewhere in the neighborhood of Athens instead of writing epistles on Arizona hangings from Fairfax County, Va.

But to the point at issue. Did the Arizona authorities deliberately bungle the hanging of which he complains, and for which this modern "Aristotle" takes civilization to task?

Again, does not hanging decrease murder? And again, since our best authorities say it costs about $350 the year to keep a person in prison, and since many persons are now starving to death simply because municipalities, State governments and the Federal Government say they cannot afford to pay these starving persons $350 a year to keep them from starving, it's about time "Aristotle" transforms himself into Solomon. Let him tell a waiting world whether he prefers to save the life of a murderer and pay $350 a year to keep him alive, or to give $350 a year to keep a starving, honest person from a certain and agonizing death by starvation and let the Arizona murderer "go hang."

DIOGENES.

Washington, July 17.

A Cartoon Is Protested.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Permit me to protest against an insidious bit of misrepresentation in the political cartoon which appeared in The Post of July 17. The cartoon is entitled "On Our Way" and portrays a boat with two rowers, one labeled "Jeffersonians" and the other "Townsendites," each rowing in the opposite direction. In the rear of the boat, acting as coxswain, sits "F. D. R." Across the stern is the legend "S. S. New Deal."

As your cartoonist must certainly know, the Townsendites are not in any sense part of the New Deal. Their speeches at the present convention in Cleveland are sufficient evidence of their hostility at the present moment to the New Deal, and certainly no one would accuse the Administration of having instigated the Townsend movement in the beginning.

Such an attempt as your cartoonist has made to cast suspicion upon the New Deal by associating it in this manner with the Townsend movement is, I repeat, an insidious bit of misrepresentation, calculated to mislead the unwary. Is this your method of carrying out your much-vaunted fairness to both parties? It seems hardly worthy of a paper which claims to be nonpartisan.

HORTENTIUS.

College Park, Md., July 17.

Shattered Pledges.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was much interested and enlightened by your editorial of July 20 entitled "Dictatorship by Default." The enlightenment was derived from the thought that anyone entrusted with serious editorial writing, assuming you to be serious, would show such naivete or gullibility. The gist of your editorial seems to be that Roosevelt could not be striving toward a dictatorship, but only drifting, as he had declared himself so definitely against centralization of government. Without this statement, your editorial would be like a nut without meat.

I assume you are familiar with Mr. Roosevelt's declaration about taxes from the sweat of those who labor, his promise to maintain sound money, promise to reduce Government expenditures and the whole trail of shattered pledges and principles. The alibis for Mr. Roosevelt's breach of these principles and pledges have been numerous. Some think they are due to gullibility, some to opportunism.

I cannot reconcile the thought that an editor who has written so realistically in the past can now seek to absolve Mr. Roosevelt from anything because of any declaration he has made in the past.

JOHN P. STORY, JR.

Washington, July 20.

Some Questions On Unionism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Two recent letters to The Post by Mr. C. E. Cross on the ultimate futility of trade unionism are somewhat mystifying. His letters are a challenge to trade unionists to clarify their position with regard to its workability when all workers are organized and are receiving similarly improved conditions.

At present, constituted trade unionism is a by-product of capitalistic production. As skilled laborers they make a contract with capital to do its work for the consideration of a higher wage rate and improved conditions for this one group of workers. This occasions a greater cost on capital, but capital merely adds the charge to its goods and passes it on to the consumer. So long as a small portion of labor is organized and thus pools its interest with capital, this extra charge is spread over the entire consuming public and thus amounts to a real wage rise to this group. But should all workers become organized and make the same deal with capital, as consumers they would have to pay for their own wage raise through increased prices.

Mr. Cross is doubtful of the judgement shown by one labor group donating funds to assist other labor groups to gain a raise in wages, when increased wages for the second group raises the price of its product which the first labor group must purchase, thus in effect lowering the real wages of the first group.

In the matter of auto mechanics attempting to raise their wages, let us reverse Mr. Cross' premise. Could not these auto mechanics have been receiving a higher wage all along had their employers not have been compelled to pay, for instance, higher costs for advertising and printing, because printers, through their union, have been able to raise their wages. Or, in other words, is it not a fact that the printers are the real enemies of the auto mechanics?

Will the trade unionist admit that he does not wish all labor to organize, so that a small group of labor can deal with capital to be the beneficiary of a portion of what is passed on to the consumer in higher costs, or does the trade unionist believe that all labor can solve the problem by taking in each other's washing? The Post Impressionist

"Advice To Youth."

Post Office, Wednesday.

WHEN first this column published a complaining letter from an employe of one of the many "administrations" which assist the Administration (of the Federal Government), we evolved the original and profound idea that, of course, there are two sides to every question. Well, we fell somewhat short of the mark, so far as we applied that idea to those administrations.

You'll remember, for instance, the communication of an ex-administrationist, a college graduate, who believed that the administrations were uneconomic in the use they made of their college graduates—set them to too trivial tasks. Now comes a counterblast from an apparent employe, who says: "I'm sure you won't want to use this letter, but, in the event you do, please leave name and address off."

She writes:

"I enjoy your Column very much and think it very clever. Nevertheless, that opinion doesn't extend to everything your correspondents have to say therein.

"A short while ago, you gave us a letter from a young man, complaining of his New Deal job. I haven't given a thought to the political phase of the matter, but I do object to the spectacle of your latest correspondent inveighing against the agency that picked him out of the rut of unemployment ('I was down and out in June, 1934,' he says) and gave him a chance to be a free man again—whether that agency was the New Deal, or the Old Round, or the Salvation Army.

"I wonder," writes this reader, "what that young man expected from a clerical job with the Government. Did he expect to be given charge of a problem of importance, perhaps involving the carrying out of an idea from its inception to its ultimate conclusion?

"Positions offering such opportunities are rare indeed, whether in industry or Government.

"When that young man received the offer of a New Deal job," this young lady continues, "he didn't wait to weigh carefully its possibilities for fulfilling his talents or satisfying his ambitions. He snatched at it with the eagerness of any other hungry individual.

"Government clerical jobs are necessarily of a routine nature, each job dealing with a specific detail. For this reason they are often tedious and dull. Also, the condition of those that hold them remains more or less static, with promotions infrequent.

"These facts have been matters of pretty common knowledge. Twenty years ago they were as familiar to everybody as they are today and they hold good no matter under what aegis the political machinery may be operating.

"There are promotion and opportunities in Government employment of the clerical sort—but ambition, initiative, assertiveness and ingenuity are, of necessity, slower to achieve recogniton and regard in this field than in others.

"When, therefore, your disgruntled correspondent raves against his New Deal job because it allegedly consisted of 'making red and blue marks on filled-out questionnaires,' he has not paused to consider the truth that much this sort of work characterizes the novitiate of most governmental clerks, under any system. These red and blue marks may seem silly to this young man, but they are important; they mean something to the executive who finally gets the completed papers. The executive then has the whole picture under his eyes. . . .

"The red and blue marks have to be made—yet, because this particular young man has to make them, he grumbles!

"I never worked for the Government until recently, but I was thankful to get my present job at about the time this young man got his, for I was similarly situated. And I still thank God that I have the job I did get. I wish I could get, for a friend of mine, the one the complainer threw away. That friend is tramping the streets of Washington right now, looking for work and would consider 'the making of red and blue marks on questionnaires' pretty wonderful.

"However, your correspondent is still youthful. Evidently he has not seen much of the hopeless unemployed in this or any other city. He doesn't seem to know what it is to get down below your last nickel, then tighten your belt and start again on the weary search for work. He could never have seen people so situated, sleeping in dark hallways and public parks.

"Meanwhile, those of us who have a deeper knowledge of such conditions are not going to complain because our jobs don't offer enough 'opportunities' for our fertile talents, or because we are getting decent salaries for working somewhat easier than galley-slaves. We're not going to complain for a while, anyway—not until things get a whole lot brighter!"

And to think that this columnist thought there were only two sides to the administrations' question! There are as many sides as the administrations have employes.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

Dictatorship Shadow.

After the Cleveland convention of the Old Folks' party it is useless to ignore the fact that a dictatorship movement has been started in the United States.

Under the domination of two ecclesiastics the meeting of aged Americans was converted into the first American Fascist rally. The old people were lured to Cleveland in the belief that they were promoting only pensions for themselves and others like them according to the so-called plan of old Dr. Frank Townsend. They believe themselves to be the genuine Americans, and at heart most of them undoubtedly are.

But before they got through the week they found themselves cheering a man who promised to organize a Black Shirt army of 100,000, in the guise of poll watchers, threatened to take over the Government and advocated a State religion.

The Rev. Gerald L. K. Smith, who whipped a Bible out of his hip pocket and waved it at the old people, also dropped a hint of compulsory attendance at the State Church on Sundays when he declared for a Bible-reading, Sunday-go-to-meeting Americanism. He is a preacher of the arm-waving, devil-baiting, free-sweating type which gave the country prohibition and the Ku Klux Klan, so it is easy to foresee what sort of State religion he would impose.

• • • •

The old people also cheered Father Coughlin when he reviled the President of the United States as a liar and double-crosser and demanded, in effect, a holy war of invasion against Mexico as the first article of the foreign policy of the new regime.

Coughlin then vanished from the scene.

Except as an agitator he probably will not amount to much in the Fascist movement, because he and Smith would soon fight over religion. In that case Smith could draw support from the Ku Klux type of clergyman, whereas Coughlin could not rally the Catholic clergy or laity.

However, there is no mistaking Coughlin's personal Fascism. He is a dictator in his own political organization, the absolute boss, consulting nobody in a group which is said to embrace millions of people.

Nobody seems to know for sure whether Dr. Townsend is a shrewd, clever demagogue, with a mask of humble altruism, or an innocent political hick who discovered himself with a big thing on his hands and allowed a clerical slicker to muscle in.

• • • •

Certainly Smith has tried to take his movement from him, but the old Mahatma has been very slippery up to now. Whenever it looks as though Smith has taken him over the old gentleman wiggles loose, and he may be just as smart in his plaintive, blundering way as Smith with all his guile.

But the doctor, too, is distinctly a dictator. He demonstrated that when he ordered Gomer Smith, the Oklahoma Cherokee, thrown out of the party for defending President Roosevelt and criticizing Gerald Smith. Gomer Smith declared the President was no Communist or atheist but an American Democrat and a God-fearing churchgoer. Dr. Townsend delivered a personal ruling that this was heresy, and the elderly Americans of the convention were treated to the spectacle of an American citizen being tossed out of a party calling itself American for praising the President of the United States.

Dr. Townsend said Gomer Smith should have saved such remarks for the privacy of the governing council.

• • • •

Thus the doctor abolished freedom of thought and speech and came out for backroom government and secrecy.

The proposed army of 100,000 Black Shirts under Gerald Smith's command is a Louisiana idea which Huey Long borrowed from abroad. Huey passed a law providing unlimited numbers of poll watchers at $5 a day each on election day.

These watchers can either swing an election by their own numbers at $5 a vote or spy on other voters to note who votes against the machine. Such voters are then subject to punitive taxes, loss of employment and other reprisals.

Also in Louisiana there is a secret State police of unlimited numbers, with no limit on their pay or their activities—another importation from the dictator countries.

An army of 100,000 Black Shirts under the command of a man who says, "We are going to take over the Government," could be expanded to much greater numbers—sufficient in time, perhaps, for an American version of the march on Rome.

And all this comes out of a meeting of elderly Americans who went to Cleveland with no thought of abolishing that free American Government but merely to demand old age pensions.

The Danzig Case

Opposing Views On Recent Developments In Free City Reveal Contrast In German And British Attitudes.

From the Berlin Weekly, a Nazi news letter on German affairs:

The statements made in Geneva by the president of the Danzig senate, Greiser, and their repercussions in foreign countries, form the principal topic of political interest in Germany. In Berlin government circles, the unmistakable attitude taken by Greiser is hailed as a fortunate act, which, wholly free from diplomatic circumspection, has forced the intolerable situation in Danzig upon the attention of the responsible statesmen of Europe.

Through its own inefficiency, the League at Geneva is responsible for the circumstance that the Danzig question must now be decided without further procrastination. In Berlin, full approval has been given to all the facts stated and all the evidence presented by Greiser. It is pointed out that the policy pursued by Hitler as well as by Pilsudsky had succeeded in eliminating the strained relations between Poland and Germany, while at the same time solving the Danzig problem as an international question in a manner satisfactory to both nations. With reference to the alleged problems affecting the maintenance of law and order in Danzig, it was the opinion in Berlin that these were matters which concerned the citizens of Danzig who, with regard to the democratic form of government have the sole right to decide in what way they will keep their house in order. That an overwhelming majority of Danzig's citizens stand squarely behind Herr Greiser and Herr Forster, could not be gainsaid in Geneva.

The League of Nations commissioner, Lester, however—and this assertion of Greiser's will find full recognition in Germany—began an activity which not only jeopardized German-Danzig-Polish peace relations, but also threatened to constitute an ever-growing reign of terror exercised within Danzig and directed against a majority of its citizens. We believe that we make no mistake in assuming that the impassioned words of Herr Greiser are in complete accord with the desire of the German people, not only those in Danzig, but throughout the nation, not only to keep the peace of eastern Europe from being endangered through the machinations of a League of Nations commissioner, but also not to see the popular will of the people of Danzig permanently disregarded.

Greiser's proposal either to send a more suitable League commissioner to Danzig, or, what would be better still, to abandon all League of Nations jurisdiction in Danzig—the same being now utterly superfluous in view of present German-Polish understanding—has met with unanimous approval in Berlin. In Berlin, these proposals are looked upon as a decisive test of whether or not, either by their acceptance or rejection, the League of Nations powers, who have spoken so much about reforming the League, will now prove by their action that they really wish to render the League capable of functioning, by bringing about these much-needed reforms themselves.

As far as German-Polish relations are concerned, it is stated emphatically in Berlin, that these recent occurrences will not result in any change of attitude. Even though on the Polish side, certain criticisms are being made as to the manner and form of Greiser's speech, the fact still remains that the Poles have recognized and will continue to recognize that the best way toward securing Eastern European peace lies in a direct understanding with Germany and Danzig, and there are no signs of this attitude being abandonoed for the sake of anything that the very doubtful League of Nations may do. On the contrary, the opinion is held in Berlin, as well as in Danzig, as stated by President Greiser in an interview with the "Voolkischer Beobachter," and which he may possibly have also repeated to Mr. Beck in a private conference, that in case the League of Nations regime in Danzig be done away with, the free city will be able to play even a more important role in the establishment of peace in Eastern Europe. That such would include the regulatiing of the minority rights of Poles living in Danzig can be taken for granted from the whole content of Greiser's speech.

From the Labor Press Service, issued by the British Labor Party's publicity department:

There is no room to doubt that a situation of real gravity for Europe is developing in Danzig. The studied insult to the high commissioner, and through him to the League, by the officers of the German cruiser, Leipsig, during its recent visit served, but to emphasize the trend of Nazi activities and aims. It was impossible for the League to ignore such a calculated and unfriendly gesture, but few can have expected that the Council deliberations on the matter would be used by Capt. Greiser, the Nazi president of the Danzig Senate, to launch such a violent attack upon the League and expose so openly one of the major objects of Nazi foreign policy.

It would be a grave error to miss or ignore the real significance of his blunt outburst. For though the League listened to the voice and observed the hand of Greiser, there can be no doubt that behind him stood the power and authority of Hitler. His declaration that "if I ask for revision before the whole world I emphasize that it is not only in the name of Danzig, but in the name of the whole German people which is awaiting resolutions from the League in the coming months that will enable the president of the senate to be seen no more at Geneva." No Nazi would dare to speak "in the name of the whole German people" unless he had been specifically empowered to do so, and only Hitler can give that authority.

Lest the League should have failed to understand what Capt. Greiser had in mind, he has since announced that "Danzig's severance from the League of Nations as far as international affairs are concerned is complete," while the official Nazi newspapers in Danzig has asserted that "the presence of Mr. Sean Lester, the League's high commissioner, is absolutely unbearable and not to be tolerated any more."

The League has confirmed its confidence in its High Commissioner, who is returning to Danzig. Col. Beck, the Polish Foreign Minister, is understood to have told Capt. Greiser that Poland and the League will uphold Mr. Lester, and that Poland will not accept any violation of her treaty rights. The Council of the League has appointed a committee composed of representatives of Great Britain, France and Portugal to follow developments in Danzig, while the Council itself is not closed but merely adjourned.

This developing crisis over Danzig serves to stress the deeply disturbed condition of Europe and the tension which continues to exist because of fears and mistrust of Germany's intentions. The fact that Hitler continues to ignore the British government's questionnaire which has been in his possession for many weeks has only accentuated uneasiness. Mr. Eden's declaration that he is not prepared to ask for an answer any more seems to be capable of only one interpretation, namely, that the British government is convinced that Hitler is deliberately refraining from sending a reply. To say the least of it such inaction is utterly inconsistent with Hitler's claim that his principal concern is to co-operate in making peace secure.

RCA Strikers Vote To Return to Work

Camden, N. J., July 21 (U.P.).—Striking employes of the Camden plant of the Radio Corporation of America voted at a mass meeting late today to end their walkout and return to work tomorrow.

The strike, marked frequently by bloody riots, has been in progress for several weeks.

The strikers—members of the United Electrical and Radio Workers of America—accepted an agreement offered by R. C. A. in which the company recognized the union as the bargaining authority for its members, but not for other R. C. A. employes.

The company also agreed to pay wages as high as are paid in any radio factory in the Camden-Philadelphia zone, will discharge workers taken on since the walkout started and will reinstate strikers without discrimination.

"Are you following the row over the steel industry?"

"All I know is that Gomer Smith, of the A. F. of L., says he will not be dictated to by Maximus Lemke."

Another Anthology

By William Lyon Phelps.

"The Play's The Thing."

This famous quotation from "Hamlet" accurately expresses my ideas about the relative importance of the play itself in the art of the theater. While acting is an immense help to a successful play, while scenery and setting are desirable, nothing can make a very poor play worth seeing, and a magnificent play will show its greatness even through bad acting and cheap scenery, as a beautiful human figure will reveal itself through ill-fitting clothes.

• • • •

And now there comes to my desk a convenient and useful volume of 570 pages, with the title "The Play's the Thing." It is edited by Profs. Fred X. Millett and Gerald Eades Bentley, of the University of Chicago. It is called "An Anthology of Dramatic Types." It really illustrates the entire history of the drama. There are 21 plays printed in full, arranged according to their kind, while under each topic the plays are given in chronological order.

Under Farce, a modern Irish play by Lady Gregory. Under Melodrama, The Drums of Oude, by the American, Austin Strong.

The second part of the volume is devoted to what are called Dramatic Attitudes. And here we find six plays: "All for Love," by Dryden; "Cyrano de Bergerac," by Rostand; "Uncle Vanya," by Chekhov; "The Return of Peter Grimm," by David Belasco; "Interior," by Maeterlinck, and "The Hairy Ape," by Eugene O'Neill.

• • • •

It is not encumbered by much annotation or explanatory matter; the brief introduction is sensible and to the point, and the preface to each of the plays gives what information is necessary.

The book is published by the Appleton-Century Co., New York.

A. F. L. Rebels Refuse to Stand Trial

Underwood & Underwood.

A. F. L. Insurgents' Reply

unions, dominating the council, violently oppose this effort. They fear the inclusions of these unions as a jeopardy to their own dead-hand control of the federation. Satisfied now as they have been for years, they regard the labor movement in America as having culminated. They are mistaken; it has just begun, and if it cannot continue within the federation, it will be because of the desperate course of the council itself."

"When the $5,000,000,000 Steel Institute announced that its resources to the full would be used in preventing an independent union of steel workers, it was promptly seconded by members of the council. The C. I. O. found itself assaulted from the rear, denounced as to its motives, branded with charges of communism, solemnly warned of failure, and finally threatened by what is intended to be a hamstringing expulsion from the federation.

"Defeatist Attitude."

"This issue is not to be obscured by charges of personal rivalry, enmity or ambition. Those familiar with the recent course of organized labor know how fundamental the issue is. They who dominate the council have little hope of, or interest in, organizing the millions of unorganized labor.

"The majority of these do not fit into crafts categories, and as to them, the council for years has adopted a defeatist attitude. As to organization in the mass-production industries, their attitude has been wholly obstructionist. . . .

"To divide this labor into a multitude of jurisdictions is to make a travesty of collective bargaining. It is fair neither to employers nor employes. It would be the source of wrangling—not unity; of weakness—not strength, and would wholly destroy the opportunity for labor to be a fair bargainer with management, or to serve as a constructive force in the industry upon which it depends."

The letter ended simply:

"The Committee for Industrial Organization will carry on."

Green in a statement last night said he accepted the C. I. O. message as a refusal of the unions to meet with the federation.

"The answer filed can more appropriately be interpreted as a speech for propaganda purposes rather than a direct reply to the invitation of the executive council to meet and answer the charges filed," he said.

"The right and power of the executive council to act in the premises and to deal with an emergency such as never before existed within the Federation of Labor, will be passed upon and determined by the executive council before any official decision is rendered."

A number of council members are known to hold that suspension of the 12 rebel unions by the council at the August 3 trial would deprive these unions of the right to send representatives to the convention in Tampa, Fla., in November.

If suspended, Lewis said he didn't know whether he would attend the convention. It is well known that the executive council's cool-headed members, cognizant of the fact that the 12 insurgents represent 40 per cent of the 5,000,000 membership of the A. F. of L., as well as 40 per cent of the dues, hesitate to bar them from an avenue of return.

Lewis, it appeared, is willing only to go forward with the organization drive, feeling that peace could be maintained within the federation if crafts unionists relaxed their insistence that all future organization work be made along crafts-union lines. Lewis will not compromise in any way on his own insistence that the mass-production industries of the country be organized into industrial unions, meaning one big union for each industry.

New Orchestra At Boulevard Suburban Club

By Chanticleer.

A bit of news emanates from Old Virginia that is sure to please lovers of good dance music. Ernest J. McCarthy, the manager of Washington's newest suburban spot, Boulevard Farms, is presenting a new band for his patrons. Six boys are in this orchestra, which is called the Boulevardians. On Saturday night the band is augmented to 11 pieces and plays until 2 a. m., while the weekday closing hour is 1. In case you are not familiar with the whereabouts of the Boulevard Farms, it is 5½ miles below Alexandria on the Mount Vernon highway.

Jimmy Bird over at the Mayfair has a show which is destined to appeal to the ladies, but that is Jimmy's pet idea. There is little doubt that he will succeed with Jack Campbell at the piano and Roy Kiser doing the vocals. Also you will find a tall, dark and handsome fellow wandering around that will be Danny Yuter.

• • • •

Amateurs will have a chance to show their talents at the Chevy Chase Lake now. Manager William Keyser announces the presentation of an amateur contest every Thursday. Aspirant should go to Station WOL on Tuesday for an audition. Lee Fields and his popular 11-piece band will do the accompanying. Any amateur appearing on this program will receive a valuable prize. In fact, even the audience, which plays an important part of the contest, has a chance to win.

That ever genial and entertaining master of ceremonies, Al Norton, has returned to the Lotus after a long absence. New names are in this week's line-up, which is the second for the Abdallah girls. June Boyd playing the zylophone, singing and dancing at the same time, and Miss Kay doing a fast rhythm tap dance are among the newcomers. Franco and Fay have been held over. Beatrice and Mavis are presenting a specialty number and Ray Donohue is singing several request numbers.

• • • •

Lest we forget, the band that was probably more responsible for the success of the Rainbow Room than any other single factor—Milton Davis and his boys—is now scoring another hit with the Russian Roof patrons at No. 1 Thomas Circle. They invite requests, which they will gladly play either during dance groups or at guests' tables.

The feature of this week's floor show at the Shoreham is a grand big floor of beautiful furs. Over $75,000 worth of the costliest furs will be modeled by Washington society girls in conjunction with the dancing of Ruthania and Malcom, now in their second week, and the comedy team of Moran and Wiser.

The new show at La Pareee goes in for dancing in a big way. Dawn and Wellford are the featured team with a sensational Apache routine and supporting them is the ballroom team of Roth and Shay and Irma Lane, acrobatic control artist. Al Sakol and his orchestra contribute no end to the success of the above-mentioned floor show.

The Powhatan Roof draws much of its crowd from elite Washingtonians who have been paying the town occasional visits from summer sports. These people have been driving into Washington from cool resorts and coming to the Powhaton Roof. It is there that they find their friends so the slogan has become "don't call, see me at the Powhatan."

Staples Rules Ballots Must Comply With Law

Richmond, Va., July 21 (AP).—Attorney General A. P. Staples said today that ballots cast in the Democratic primary of August 4 must be marked in accordance with the new affirmative voting law or be voided.

Scratching of names of candidates, no longer required under the new law, will not invalidate the ballots, however, if check marks are properly placed opposite the names of the candidates being voted for, he held.

Flames Destroy 12 Troy, O., Buildings

Troy, Ohio, July 21 (AP).—Fire threatened the entire industrial section of Troy late today and burned a dozen buildings, including a factory which covered an entire block.

Flying embers were reported as far as Vandalia, 10 miles away. Troy is 17 miles north of Dayton.

Fire departments of Piqua, Covington and Tippicanoe City aided Troy firemen in bringing the flames under control.

Other buildings burned included the American Express Co., the William Gaier Grocery building, Troy Gravel Co. plant, water towers of the Big Four and B. & O. railroads.

The Big Four Railroad station platform caught fire several times, but the flames were extinguished.

Ship Sinks, 43 Saved.

Manila (Wednesday), July 21 (AP)—Capt. Pedro Roses, commander of the Isidoro Pons, wirelessed the owners today that the craft sank after running aground off Palauig Point. The 43 members of the crew were rescued by the steamer Pedro. The Pons went down after she was battered by high seas several hours after she ran aground Tuesday in a heavy mist.

Ethiopians Clash With Italian Force

Cairo, Egypt, July 21 (U.P.).—A reorganized Ethiopian army has engaged Italian troops in a fierce battle outside Addis Ababa, the Egyptian consul there informed the foreign office tonight.

The consul's dispatch said Ras Kassa, one of Emperor Haile Selassie's most trusted generals, was at the head of the Ethiopian forces.

Woman Links Police to Gang At Hamm Trial

By the Associated Press.

St. Paul, July 21.—A woman provided today's bit of sensation in a Federal Court trial in which repeated assertions of police co-operation with kidnapers have all but overshadowed the case under consideration. That case involves the guilt or innocence of John (Jack) Peifer, charged with conspiracy in the $100,000 William Hamm, jr., kidnaping.

Mrs. Georgette Winkler, widow of a slain Chicago gang leader, testifying as a Government witness, said Peifer, St. Paul night club operator, had assured her it would be safe to come to St. Paul with her husband, Gus Winkler, "because we have police protection there."

A few months later, after Federal Judge M. M. Joyce had denied a defense plea that Alvin Karpis and Charles Fitzgerald, both of whom have pleaded guilty, be forced to testify, the Government rested its case.

Mrs. Winkler's testimony was intended by prosecutors as corroboration of that of Byron Bolton, confessed kidnaper. Bolton, principal witness for the Government last week, related that $25,000 of the ransom money had been "set aside" for Tom Brown, former St. Paul police chief, for informing kidnapers of police movements after Hamm was seized June 15, 1933.

Chief Counsel Archie M. Casey disclosed later a subpena has been issued for Brown as a defense witness at the trial. The defense hopes to upset the Bolton testimony.

Others who were members with Brown of the kidnap detail that investigated the abduction testified subsequently that Brown reported "no connection" after being ordered to visit what the Government now contends was a kidnap hideout here.

Gus Barfus, commissioner of public safety, who last week ordered Brown suspended as head of the police auto theft division, today asked City Attorney John L. Connolly to prepare a dismissal order as soon as evidence is in shape.

Mrs. Winkler testified that Peifer visited her husband concerning proposed negotiations with Fred Goetz, named by Bolton as a kidnap plot principal. She was the fourth woman to testify today.

Mrs. Edna Murray, brought here from the Missouri State prison, outlined movements of members of the Barker-Karpis gang at the time of the kidnaping. She named as visitors at a Long Lake, Ill., cottage, where Bolton said the ransom was split among Fred Barker, Alvin Karpis, Volney Davis, Paula Harmon, Charles Fitzgerald, William Weaver and Arthur (Doc) Barker.

On the Air Today

The time has come for the Three Musketeers of local radio—Godfrey, Hittenmark and Brown—to take a fresh hitch to their trousers and turn an ear to their loud speakers.

Rumors are afoot over at the National Press Building (and that would be the inner sanctum of N. B. C.) that a new contender for honors as the people's radio choice is coming forward with astonishing decisiveness. So fast that even the office gossip is at least one day behind with all developments of a major sort.

Lee Everett is the name. Not a new name, either. Lee came up from North Carolina many months ago to direct programs for WJSV. He took his turn making station breaks, did a program entitled "The Old Timer" and generally made himself useful. But nothing much happened.

A few short weeks ago he began hanging his hat on the N. B. C. hook. Just about the time "The Night Watchman" shoved off on his experimental rounds after midnight at WMAL, Lee drew that assignment. And that, as Capt. Henry would say, was "only the beginnin'."

Everett's easy-going, good-humored, philosophical microphone manner as the "Night Watchman" instantly made him scores of friends. So many, in fact, that inquiries from sponsors began to come in.

In the last ten days Everett has twice been declared the owner of the most likeable voice in Washington radio in years—by those who are able to make it interesting for him financially. He begins this week a new series of intimate quarter-hours, Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, for the sponsors of "Uncle Zip" who have replaced that show for the summer by the Everett program.

Ordinarily I would shy at reciting these details. But Lee Everett is not the kind to toss away his last month's hats because he is beginning to click in a big way. He is just as real and genuine and friendly as he sounds. He is sincere—and somewhat like Bob Burns—quite amazed at the definite turn in his fortune. No, there's not a possibility of Lee Everett ever being spoiled.

Furthermore, competition is still the best stimulant in any business or profession—and the Godfrey-Hittenmark-Brown entente will welcome the entrance of another air personality (as much as I shudder at that word) into the Washington show.

Here and there:

Harry Horlick and his veteran Gypsies will leave the airways this fall to make way for the full-hour Kate Smith program. What will radio be without those "Gypsies?"

Frank Parker will have a radio show of his own this fall. Details will be ready in a few days. It will be a variety show.

The show that has led the pack on the Intercity net for this last year, "Good Will Court," moves to an N. B. C. net beginning September 20, replacing Major Bowes and his amateur show at WRC Sunday nights.

Aside to Uncle Arthur Godfrey:

Deeply obliged, my friend, for such kind treatment as you awarded that ditty, "I'm Getting Sentimental Over You," as per last week's request. On hearing it repeated a night later, however, my suspicions were aroused and I discovered that your secretary, Miss Richardson, had had a hand in it.

Many District Socialites Will Hear Gov. Landon

By Dudley Harmon.

In a summer when politics is fashionable and societies prefer political conventions to bathing beaches, it is not surprising to learn that many prominent in society will journey to Topeka for the notification ceremonies there tomorrow of Gov. Landon.

Mrs. Dolly Gann, sister of the late Vice President Charles Curtis, and principal figure in the famous dinner-table precedence controversy a few years ago, has been in Topeka for several days conferring with Gov. Landon. Kansas is her native State. With her husband, Mr. Edward Gann, she will stay over for tomorrow's ceremonies.

A zealous Republican, Mrs. Gann stumped for Hoover before the last election, and plans to be active again in this year's campaign. She already has a definite speaking engagement in Saginaw, Mich., on August 11.

Prominent among others who have been conferring with Gov. Landon is Representative John B. Hollister, of Ohio, who is a ranking member of the House Committee on Banking and Currency and a member of the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments. Representative Hollister who, with Mrs. Hollister, used to give weekly cocktail parties on Mondays last year in mock celebration of the "more abundant life," is probably conferring about the budget, as his views on the necessity of a "pay as you go" financial system correspond with Gov. Landon's.

Representative and Mrs. Chester Bolton, of Ohio, who have been actively campaigning since the convention, also will be on hand for the notification. Mrs. Bolton has been playing an important part in the direction of women's activities in her State.

The keynoter of the Republican convention, Senator Frederick Steiwer, is so busy as chairman of the committee which will notify Col. Knox of his nomination as candidate for Vice President, he is unable to leave his home in Oregon for tomorrow's ceremonies. However, with Mrs. Steiwer, he will be on hand July 30 in Chicago for the official notification of Col. Knox.

Mrs. William Fitch Kelley, president of the Washington League of Republican Women, will leave her country place on Rockville pike early next week for the Chicago ceremonies. She is a member of the committee on arrangements. Later she will go to Geneva, Ill., to visit her son, Mr. McClure Kelley, for two weeks before returning to Washington.

It is possible Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, who has been visiting her brother, Mr. Benjamin Nourse, in San Francisco, will stop in Topeka on her way East, to attend the event. Mrs. Rogers has already conferred with the Governor, and had luncheon with him at his home a week or so ago.

Another of Gov. Landon's recent conferees, Senator Warren Barbour, of New Jersey, is unable to be present tomorrow. With Mrs. Barbour, he has returned to their home at Red Bank, N. J., after a tour of the country.

Participants Are Guests at Dinner in Army-Navy Club.

A table forming a horseshoe was arranged at the Army-Navy Country Club last night for the dinner given by the Army teams for members of the visiting teams entered in the Intra-Circuit Polo Tournament now in progress at Potomac Park. The dinner was served in one of the dining rooms of the clubhouse, following cocktails on the roof, and the guests danced on the roof later in the evening.

Maj. Arthur P. Thayer, polo representative of Fort Myer, and Capt. Charles Hancock Reed, who is in charge of the present tournament, with Mrs. Thayer and Mrs. Reed, acted as hosts for the dinner dance.

Among the 80 guests were members of the Maryland Polo Club, West Shore Polo Club, of Harrisburg; the Fort Hoyle Polo Club, the Quantico Marines Club, and the Fauquier-Loudon Club.

The guests of honor included Gen. Leon Kromer, chief of Cavalry, from Washington; Brig. Gen. Ernest D. Scott, commanding officer at Fort Hoyle, and Mrs. Scott; Col. Jonathan Wainwright, new commanding officer at Fort Myer, and Mrs. Wainright; Col. Kenyon Joyce, former commanding officer there, who is now on temporary duty in Baltimore before going to the West Coast, with Mrs. Joyce.

This afternoon Maj. and Mrs. Ernest Harmon will entertain at an informal tea for the teams in today's matches, the War Department and Third Cavalry Yellow teams and the Quantico and Fauquier-Loudoun players.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Woman Calls Sister, Mother of Three, Mentally Defective, Asks How to Safeguard Children's Welfare.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have a sister who is mentally defective. She has three children, all girls. The eldest is not quite 16, the second is 10, and the youngest is 6 months old. Some years ago my sister and her husband separated; then about 18 months ago he started living with her again intermittently, but has never contributed a cent toward his children's support since they first separated. He drinks and gambles terribly and claims the people he works for just give him food and clothing, which I doubt, but I have no way of knowing.

My father died less than a year ago, leaving my mother with less than $200, which didn't last long. They are on relief and that never reaches, so my daughter (with whom I live) has been helping them out a little. I have been away from my husband for eight years and have had no work for about a year so, of course, I cannot help them.

* * * *

I feel so sorry for these poor children, who are entitled to a decent life. Their mother is really a menace to them and I think they should be placed in some nice home where they will have a chance. I don't think my sister is bad enough to be placed in an institution, but she is absolutely incapable of rearing children. Whenever she has to do a little work for them she flies into a temper and uses the vilest language to them.

* * * *

I am terribly ashamed of her and none of my friends know about her. I left home 28 years ago and since then have gotten used to a nice comfortable home and have acquired some nice friends among the better class and as I am ambitious, I would hate to have to give them up and sacrifice myself to my sister and live the way she does, and anyhow, I know I could not stand being around her. I would probably lose my mind as she is a terrible person to live with—so slovenly and lazy. My mother has practically raised her children for her and taken care of her, too. But mother is 74 now and can hardly get around. The doctor says she will live only a few months longer.

* * * *

Talk to Case Worker.

DEAR PERPLEXED: Since your sister's family is on relief, I suggest you go to the Public Assistance Division Office nearest her home and ask to talk with the social worker who is handling your sister's case. Public relief cannot have been administered to the family without the case worker's knowing almost as much about the various aspects of this deplorable problem as you do. We must assume that the social worker, knowing the problem, is as interested as you are in seeing that the children's welfare is safeguarded.

* * * *

Tell the social worker what, in your opinion, are your sister's needs, and make it plain to her that none of her relatives are in a position to supply these needs. If necessary, the social worker will no doubt enlist the co-operation of the Juvenile Protective Association, 1212 Eleventh street northwest, and possibly the Family Service Association, 1022 Eleventh street northwest, in pushing the solution of the problem to its logical conclusion.

* * * *

Do you think you are being fair with the man you plan to marry by keeping him in ignorance of the skeletons in your family closet? Since marriage is presumably for better or for worse, it seems to me it is always best for the parties concerned to know the worst there is to know in advance of taking the vows. M. H.

Attention: "X. Y. Z."

NOTE TO "X. Y. Z.:" Under date of July 17 you inclosed two letters to this column, in one of which you say, "In this letter I am describing my true circumstances . . . and ask you kindly not to print anything I say." Attached to it is the second communication, with a memorandum to the effect: "You may publish this, putting in whatever you think may make it more effective." Now, the second letter is virtually a carbon copy of one which was published in this column a few days ago, from a woman who outlined her qualifications for a certain job and expressed her hope of finding such a place.

* * * *

May I explain that I am not a handy-letter writer for persons wanting jobs, in the first place, and in the second place, it is not my intention to perpetrate a hoax on readers of this column by printing a letter from a correspondent who makes it plain from the start that he is not truthfully stating his case.

* * * *

As a matter of fact, the letter in which you describe your "true circumstances" is far better calculated to rouse interest in your predicament than is the second, and if you wish me to publish a portion of it, I will do so. Perhaps you had better write again. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Silicosis and Industrial Hygiene.

It may be said that a mild state of hysteria prevails relative to the problem of silicosis. While it constitutes an important health hazard it is not a "widespread devastating menace." Furthermore, it is preventable, and now that its nature is fully recognized, a dozen years at the outside should see the total absence of new cases.

Most of us inhale a good deal of dust with the air taken into the lungs and there is no greater argument for nose breathing than the fact that the hairs and the moist mucous surfaces of the air passages will catch and filter out a large portion of these particles. Mouth breathing, on the other hand, allows considerable dust to reach the trachea, the bronchi, and the lungs. Most of it is not disease producing. For example, finely divided carbon may even color a lung perfectly black without interfering greatly with its function and without causing inflammation.

Air, however, that contains a high percentage of silica may bring on what is called "generalized fibrosis" in the walls of the small bronchi and the adjacent air spaces. Silica is known as a chemically active substance. Whenever bits of this material get into the air sacs white cells engulf them. These cells then find their way into the lymph channels, and slowly but surely migrate toward the root of the lung in an effort to get rid of the foreign matter. In the course of their wanderings they may lodge somewhere along the route and a wall of connective tissue (a scar) be built around them. This may lead to partial blocking of the lymph channels themselves.

Silica Sole Cause.

No one can have silicosis unless he has breathed dust containing a fairly large amount of powdered quartz (silicon dioxide) incident to such occupations as granite cutting or sandblastnig. The size of the granules is all important. Danger is present if they are exceedingly small and of high concentration. Larger fragments cannot be inhaled and the standard of safety is set at not more than 10 million particles per cubic foot of air with less than 30 per cent silica. Standard methods of counting and measuring are available.

The time and length of exposure are factors. The body is able to defend itself against low silica counts for a long time—in fact, many years. In can cope also with high concentrations for shorter periods. Many investigators state that before detectable changes in the lung can be found two years under the worst possible conditions will be required.

A definite safety element has been shown to exist whenever silica is mixed with harmless forms of dust. A fairly large amount—several times that which is considered safe—may then be breathed with impunity.

Another curious fact is that individuals differ in their response to the irritation. Two men working side by side, engaged in the same occupation under exactly the same circumstances may show a decided difference in the lung changes. While one may develop fibrosis within a few years the other may not for some five or ten years thereafter. Much depends upon the general health of the individual as to nutrition, pre-existing respiratory disease, such as bronchitis, and the further fact that one may be a mouth breather.

Disease Preventable.

Silicosis is a preventable disease, but it can be eradicated only through the cooperation of industrial engineers with research laboratories. There are two precautionary measures that must be adopted. First, a reduction in the amount of silica that can reach the lungs and, second, a shifting of workmen every few months from dangerous situations to those that are safe. Neither is impossible of achievement and industry should be quick to see the economic importance of preserving the health of its employes.

Mothers Are Warned of Danger Lurking in Lamp Cords.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

MRS. JONES liked to be able to move the lamps about and, since her living room had few wall plugs, she had long extensions on each lamp instead. Some of these went under the rugs, some about the edge of the room. Altogether, there must have been some 10 or 15 yards of loose wire in use.

The wire was carefully insulated to start with; but contsant use wears out any fabric, and in time the silk covering was frayed and the wire began to be exposed. No one noticed it because it was under the rug. It might have caused serious trouble, but before it did, an accident occurred which taught Mrs. Jones a lesson.

The baby, crawling about the floor, put one of the lamp cords into his mouth. He might have been electrocuted. Mrs. Jones decided that it was best either to put in a few more wall plugs or put up with fewer feet of wire, and stationary lamps rather than risk her baby's life.

The cords of lamps and other electrical appliances should be of moderate length and constantly watched and kept in good repair. Any factory which was as careless about inspecting its electrical equipment as is the average home would soon be debarred from insurance by the fire underwriters.

No one in the day of gas lamps would have had yards of gas tubing draped about the room. The danger of escaping gas was too great, the odor unpleasant and the chance of fatality too strong.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

"I FEEL so discouraged about our living room" said a brown eyed lady in yellow linen, "because it's too small and there's nothing I can do about that. Oh, I don't mean that it is one of those little rooms you can practically reach across . . . it's 12x14. But I would love so to have a really spacious huge living room."

Huge living rooms are lovely, of course, but don't be discouraged over a smaller one. Some of the most charming rooms in the world are little and intimate. If the lady in yellow will emphasize this quality in her living room, she'll find it will help a lot. Then there are a lot of points in furnishing the room that help. A plain wall and plain floor covering and no jumpy designs in the fabrics for furniture and windows . . . all these help. Then if she will leave one wall a different shade than the others, an interesting, open effect will be achieved. Mirrors do a great deal if she can manage to get some large ones.

She was such an attractive woman, without being exactly a magazine cover beauty, that we couldn't resist imagining a living room we'd like to see her in. A nut brown room it would be, using the rather nice walnut furniture that she already has, but adding a wide low coffee for cordiality and a tall slim secretary to hold lots of things but not take up much space . . . besides it would be one piece with height which helps a room keep from being monotonous.

Three walls of the room we'd have in a nice rosy beige shade . . . these would be the walls with doors and windows. The one unbroken wall we'd have in nut brown in a dull surfaced paint or paper rather than shiny. The woodwork, including the doors, would all be in that rosy beige . . . the glass curtains would be in this very same shade in ninon and then we'd have draperies of the very same shade and material looped back gracefully (made quite full to get a nice cascading of folds) over the curtains. And wooden cornice at the top painted rosy beige. The floor we'd have carpeted in jade green with a monotone pattern to get the effect of a plain color with the practicality of figured floor covering. And for the furniture coverings, nut browns in pleasantly textured materials.

Send a stamp for Miss Boykin's bulletin "What's in a Chair." It will be helpful in buying new upholstered furniture.

Few Clothes Should Be Worn When at Play

Sun Suits, Loose Garments Best for Children in Summer.

IF YOUR CHILDRN are fretful and seem to have bad dispositions, it all may be due to the way they are dressed. The least amount of clothing possible is a good rule for play clothes these torrid days. But these few must be chosen wisely.

Clothes or sun suits, which hang straight from the shoulders, without collars and preferably without belts or other unnecessary trimming touches, are the best choice—from a health and comfort point of view. Cotton is not only the coolest material for summer, but the new fast-dye versions, permit of much laundering without any harm to appearance.

Allow the wee members of the family to go stockingless, but do insist upon their wearing shoes—sandals which permit a free circulation of air, yet sturdy enough to protect the tender feet. Short clothes, above the knees, are the only kind for small children to play in. Long-legged sailor suits and such, not only look much too warm, but are decidedly uncomfortable. If they are subjected to sun in the heat of the day, it is advisable to protect the head by wearing some kind of light, broad-brimmed hat.

For either play, school or dress-up, childrens' garments should be fashioned so they can dress themselves. "Self-help" clothes are not only a boon to the tired mother, but according to child psychologists, they develop confidence and initiative in small children. Undergarments, as well as dresses and suits, are now made in this manner, with zippers and as few buttons as possible, to make the task of self-dressing as easy as possible for the youngsters.

School and party clothes, after the modern manner of smart simplicity, should be as health-conductive and comfortable as play costumes. While a bit of trimming is not amiss here, clothes in this category should be typically juvenile. They may copy adult style trends to a certain degree, but the fact that they are being designed especially for children should not be overlooked.

London Charities Turn To Movies for Profits

London (AP).—Charity organizers are finding film premiers more popular than society balls, and also that they often produce higher profits.

It is predicted for the fall that the charity film matinee will be as popular a social function as was the afternoon stage show in the reign of King Edward VII.

And Call It Accident

By Mrs. Belloc Loundes

Though her childhood sweetheart, faithful George Dwight, pleads with her to come home to America and marry him, Ruth Starling insists on staying in London and using her recently inherited wealth to go on the stage. Through her London lawyer, Mr. Singleton, Ruth meets Capt. Philip Trefane, who is interested in theatricals, and his wife, Iris, two scheming adventurers. Ruth offers to finance a theatrical venture under Trefane's management. His aunt, the Marchioness Cicster, has loaned the Trefanes her old castle on the Cornish coast for the summer and Ruth accepts their offer to stay with them as a paying guest. Lady Cicester's manor house is near by. Capt. Trefane secretly insures Ruth's life in his favor. Lady Cicester's son, Lord John, is attracted to Ruth and Ruth, though the man is horribly ugly, likes him. Philip rows Ruth out for a swim, then lets the boat drift away, expecting Ruth to drown on the long swim back to shore. Philip pretends to have a cramp. Iris races out in a motor boat and rescues Ruth. Ruth gives Iris a check to pay for the installation of a bathroom. Philip insists it can only be built in the annex, a forbidding, isolated building, and that quarters for Ruth shall be arranged there. Her second night in the annex Ruth awakes to find the building on fire. Helen Bates, Trefane's stepdaughter by a previous marriage, saves her life. Lord John proposes and Ruth touched by his tenderness, nearly accepts. Then George Dwight calls from America to tell Ruth that her money has been lost in a bank failure, and that he is leaving for England at once. Ruth still has $250,000 in a London bank and insists on going on with her play. The Trefanes hastily arrange to close the castle and get to London. Iris goes ahead. Philip is to follow with Ruth.

PHILIP jerked out, "You'll see Iris tonight."

As he uttered the word tonight Ruth remembered that the night before she looked at the new moon through glass.

"I'm longing to get to London!" she exclaimed. "For one thing, I'm expecting my lawyer from America. Also, I do feel that the quicker we can select our cast and start rehearsals, the better it will be, Philip."

"I'm a bit sorry you turned down that other play."

Her face crimsoned, and even in the midst of the violent agitation which now possessed him, he felt a touch of acid amusement. Ruth Starling was an old-fashioned girl and no mistake! Because she had thought a part unpleasant, she had lost him a big commission within the last few days. However, nothing mattered now.

"By the way, Iris left you this note," and he took up the piece of paper and handed it to her. She read it quickly, he watching her the while.

"Surely, you could run into the manor house and say good-bye to my aunt this morning? I expect you know that John has gone away for a couple of days?"

"Yes, I know that," said Ruth in a strained tone. "But I'm afraid, Philip, that I ought to wait till early this afternoon to say good-bye to Lady Cicester. She is very old-fashioned, you know, and she's been very kind to me."

Surprised at Answer.

He said with a touch of ferocity that now and again came into his voice. "She won't feel nearly so interested in you when she learns the truth—I mean that you have lost all your money."

"I should be sorry to think that," she said in a low voice, though she knew, alas, that what he said was true. She was, however, somewhat surprised that he said it.

He was watching her intently, longing for what he knew was going to happen to be over and done with.

At last she had finished, and he said, "You have never seen our quarters, have you?"

She looked at him for a moment, not quite understanding what he meant.

"I mean the rooms beyond the king's chamber."

He was breathing rather quickly, and staring at her in a way that struck her as odd, and unlike himself.

"No, I have never seen them." Ruth made the admission in a slightly awkward tone. She had often longed to see Iris' bedroom, but she had never been asked to do so, and some instinct had held her back from asking that trifling favor of her friend.

"Would you like to see them now? Of course they're dismantled in a way, but they are fine rooms. We managed to rig up a kind of bath in my dressing room, and there is cold water laid on. If the marchioness knew that she'd be awfully put out! But luckily she doesn't, and I hope never will."

He was talking for the sake of talking as he opened wide the narrow door which led into the sitting room. Through the side open door Ruth noticed that the eighteenth century scalloped mahogany table which generally stood in the middle of the room over a fine rug had been moved into a corner.

Mrs. Landon's Social Work More Significant Politically Than Her Housewifely Skill

By Malvina Lindsay,
Woman's Page Editor.

A NEW and refreshing character portrayal of Mrs. Alfred M. Landon, wife of the Republican Presidential nominee, is given by Mrs. Landon's mother, Mrs. Samuel A. Cobb, in a recent interview. Mrs. Cobb tells of her daughter's activities as a volunteer social worker before her marriage, of her work as president of the Board of the United Charities, and as an official in many welfare organizations in Topeka. Mrs. Landon, since her marriage, her mother points out, has kept up her educational and welfare activities, maintaining a special interest in a day nursery for children of working mothers.

* * * *

All progressive-minded women, whether Republicans or Democrats, will take satisfaction in seeing Mrs. Landon emerge from the stock role of the simple little homebody wife of a political candidate. Many of her admirers feel that the hausfrau picture is being a bit overdone, that it is creating a situation not only unfair to her but to women generally.

MRS. LANDON is the mother of two small children. That is a rare situation for a Presidential nominee's wife. It is one that makes a strong appeal to public sentiment and provides "human interest" material for writers. But after all, being a devoted wife and mother is a fairly common feminine feat. Of greater significance is the fact that Mrs. Landon has a social consciousness and compassion that reaches beyond the confines of her home.

* * * *

In Topeka the name of Theo Cobb (later Theo Cobb Landon) has long been associated with such things as scholarships, playgrounds, clinics, nurseries, girls' homes, charity drives and similar activities. A woman who has served as president of the Board of the United Charities of her city undoubtedly has a realistic and understanding view of the world about her. Those who press her fitness for First Lady should emphasize these attributes rather than play to the prejudice of the mob by picturing her as a village housewife.

A GENERATION or so ago the wife of a Presidential or other important candidate invariably assumed the role of her husband's shadow. She let it be known that she had no interest whatever in affairs outside her home, that her life was dedicated to overseeing the kitchen and children and above all to "taking care of Mr. X." She smugly paraded these virtues without realizing how they reflected on own selfishness—to say nothing of Mr. X's infantilism.

* * * *

Lauding a woman for being a good wife and mother and even a charming hostess is about the same as denouncing sin. Women who are interested in the advancement of their sex don't want to see an undue premium put on these normal virtues. They do not want the women of the future feel that they can sit serenely back on such laurels and feel no obligation to make the world more comfortable and pleasant beyond their own four walls.

* * * *

Fortunately today the philosophy of "me and my wife, my son John and his wife, us four and no more," is coming into disrepute. Women, particularly, with their increased leisure and widened horizons are recognizing a noblesse oblige that calls them to service outside their own homes. It is encouraging to women generally to know that the wives of both the Presidential nominees, Mrs. Landon and Mrs. Roosevelt, have heard and heeded this call.

Better Baby Drive Reaches Alaska

Barrow, Alaska (AP).—This farthest north Alaska settlement boasts a Barrow Better Babies Club this summer, the result of pioneer efforts of Mrs. Henry W. Greist, superintendent of the little Presbyterian Mission Hospital on the Arctic coast here.

It started last winter when Mrs. Greist invited Eskimo mothers to bring their infants to weekly health clinics, and discovered that, what with the scarcity of fuel to melt snow, Eskimo babies get fewer baths than is considered proper by child specialists in the United States.

She rationed them a gallon of water and a cake of soap apiece and taught the Eskimo and half-breed mothers how to bathe a baby.

Prize Recipes Show Tapioca Versatile Dish

Miss Adeline Terrell Wins First Award With Veal Rolls Louisiana.

THE prize-wnining recipes in The Post's contest of last week which are printed below for your approval will prove that tapioca is a versatile as well as popular culinary ingredient.

The first prize of $5 is awarded Miss Adeline Terrell, 801 Philadelphia avenue, Silver Spring, Md., for her recipe for veal rolls Louisiana. Mrs. E. H. Libbey, 3513 Twentieth street northeast, wins the second prize of $3 for her recipe for boardwalk entree. The three remaining prizes of $1 each go to Miss Geraldine Busher, 13 Second street northeast, for her recipe for Jamaica fluff; to Miss Erva Barger, 1125 Buchanan street northwest, for her recipe for green cheese souffle, and to Miss Berenice Greene, Falls Church, Va., for her recipe for corn pudding.

Veal Rolls Louisiana

1 No. 2½ can tomatoes
¼ cup chopped onion
2 tablespoons bacon fat
¼ cup chopped green pepper
1 tablespoon chopped red pepper
¼ cup chopped celery
2 teaspoons salt
⅓ teaspoon pepper
½ cup quick cooking tapioca
1 bay leaf
1 teaspoon sugar
½ teaspoon curry powder

Combine veal, pork, suet, salt, pepper and tapioca, mix well and mold into eight oblong rolls. Brown the rolls in bacon fat, then remove to a casserole. To the fat in the pan add celery, onion and green and red peppers. Cok five minutes. Then add remaining ingredients. Reheat to boiling point. Pour over rolls and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) for one hour. Serve with hot biscuits or steamed rice.

Board Walk Entree.

2 pound cleaned and boned fish
1 quart chopped fresh tomatoes
8 large stuffed olives
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
¼ cup salad oil
¼ cup quick cooking tapioca
1 large onion
1 small clove garlic
1 teaspoon celery salt
½ teaspoon salt
1-3 teaspoon pepper.

Sprinkle the fish with salt and brown quickly in the salad oil (use a large, heavy frying pan). Remove fish, add sliced onion, garlic, and olives; saute five minutes, then add tomatoes and cook until tomatoes lose their shape. Add tapioca and cook about five minutes longer. Add lemon juice, lemon rind, salt, pepper, celery salt and fish and simmer gently until fish is tender. Remove fish carefully to serving platter, pour sauce around it, chill and garnish with quartered lemon and parsley.

Serve with potato chips and tiny hot rolls.

Jamaica Fluff.

1 quart milk
¾ cup sugar
2 tablespoons rum
1-3 cup finely chopped preserved ginger and sirup
1-3 teaspoon salt
2 eggs
3 tablespoons cold water

Put the milk in a double boiler and add the salt and when milk is hot add the tapioca, sifting it in slowly. Cook until clear, stirring often. Separate eggs, beat yolks, add cold water and ½ cup of sugar. Blend well and add to tapioca and stir until a nice custard results. Add preserved ginger and sirup and the rum. Make a meringue of the egg whites and remaining sugar and beat until stiff; then fold into the custard and chill thoroughly before serving. This is a delicious hot day dessert that will serve 10-12.

Green Cheese Scouffle.

1 cup grated American cheese
3 eggs, separated
1 cup cooked spinach, finely chopped or put through food chopper
1 cup milk

Scald the milk in top of double boiler, add tapioca, and cook 15 minutes or until tapioca is clear, stirring frequently. Add cheese and stir until melted. Cool. Beat the egg yolks until thick and lemon colored and add to the tapioca mixture, mixing well. Add the spinach. Beat the egg whites with one teaspoon of salt, and fold them in. Pour into a greased baking dish, and bake in a pan of hot water in a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit), for 50 minutes. Or bake in ramekins for 30 minutes.

Corn Pudding.

2 cups milk, scalded
2 eggs, well beaten
1 teaspoon minced onion
2 tablespoons minced parsley
2 cups tender corn
Dash of cayenne
1¼ teaspoons salt

Add tapioca to milk and cook in double boiler 15 minutes, stirring frequently. Pour small amount of tapioca mixture over eggs, stirring vigorously. Return to double boiler. Add parsley, onion and salt. Stir well, then add cayenne and corn. Mix. Pour into greased baking dish, place in pan of hot water, and bake in moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) about 1 hour or until done. Serves eight.

Variety Suggested In Summer Drinks

For summer thirst, you need a long cold drink. A bubbling ginger-ale is satisfying, but for variety and nutriment, try some of these, too.

For cinnamon milk shake add 2½ tablespoons chocolate syrup and a sprinkling of cinnamon to every glass of chilled milk. Place in a shaker and shake well.

To make cocoa egg nog, beat the white of an egg stiff, and while still beating gradually add 1 teaspoon sugar, 1 teaspoon cocoa, dash of nutmeg and ¾ cup milk.

For spiced grape juice, simmer for 15 minutes 1 quart grape juice, 2 tablespoons sugar, 2 tablespoons grated orange rind, 3 tablespoons lemon juice, 1 cup boiling water, 4 whole cloves and ½ teaspoon cinnamon. Remove from stove and chill.

The Homely Dill Sparkles in Role of Appetizer

Nibbling has become more popular since the dill pickle appetizer has been added to the tray of canapes. Here you see the glory of green dill pickle rings filled with golden Cheddar spread adding their color and flavor to a tray of crisp canapes.

Wave of Appetizer Nibbling Is Inspiration for Hostess

Relieves Tired Housewife of Usual Summer Drudgery in Entertaining; New Type Cream Cheese Becomes Popular.

By Dorothea Duncan.

NIBBLING HAS BECOME a favorite summer pastime. It was inspired by the hostess who arrived just in the nick of time to refresh her languishing summer guests with a tray full of appetizers and long, cooling drinks, and it is cheerfully indorsed by all the leisure-loving porch loungers, garden putterers, sun sitters and hammock swingers.

When outside temperatures inspire lingering in the shade or lolling upon the beach, there are few services more attractive than a tray or platterful of canapes and long cooling drinks. Such canapes are an open invitation to have another and still another. And the hostess cares not how many her guests nor how great their appetites for the canapes are easily and quickly made with the interesting variety of cheese spreads available everywhere today.

Crunchy crackers in various shapes, sizes, and degrees of thinness and thickness are a simple and cool background for pineapple cream spread, pimiento, Roquefort, Camembert, and relish spreads. For the most casual porch parties, guests can help themselves to their favorite spread if the filled jars or dishes are spread before them in several varieties.

Many Tricks.

But for more formal occasions—a garden party, for example, there are any number of ingenious tricks that can be applied by the hostess in preparing a trayful of canapes as colorful and gay as the garden in which she is serving them.

Let's consider the succulent but rather homely dill pickle first. It is picnic fare to many, but to the clever hostess it is the foundation for the most sophisticated of appetizers. And this is the way the metamorphosis of the dill pickle is accomplished: Hollow the seeds and part of the meat from a large dill pickle. Stuff it with Cheddar cheese spread, which is soft enough to make the stuffing easy. Chill, slice crosswise into party-sized widths. The green of the pickle, surrounding a golden center of cheese, makes a color combination worthy of the handsomest summer party—and these sharp mingled flavors are just right to lend that indefinable character to a tray of appetizers.

New Cream Cheese.

Then for the hostess who is always seeking new taste thrills to please her guests, there is a new cream cheese spread on the market—designed especially for appetizers. It is neither too sharp nor too mild, but manages to retain an indefinable charm straight through an evening of nibbling. Little rosettes of this appetizer spread made with the aid of a pastry tube, placed on crackers, are festive to look at as well as satisfactory to munch.

Tiny stalks of celery, with a crisp frill of their own yellow leaves intact, stuffed with olive pimiento spread, lend a fresh, summery look to any tray. They are always popular with the male members of the party, for a celery stalk looks like something they can really get their teeth into.

If your tray needs a bit of color, border the edge with clusters of fresh grapes, polished plums, peaches and shiny black cherries, from which the stems have not been removed.

1-3 cup milk
2 eggs
1 tablespoon lemon juice
2 cups blueberries
1½ cup flour
1-8 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon baking powder

Cream the butter and sugar until light, add well-beaten yolks, salt, and beat in alternately the flour which has been sifted once, measured and sifted again with the baking powder and the milk. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites, flavor with lemon juice and mix in very carefully to avoid crushing the blueberries which have been dredged in 1 tablespoon extra flour. Bake in a moderately hot oven (375 degrees F.) for first half hour, then lower the temperature and bake in a moderate oven (325 degrees to 350 degrees F.) until cake is done. Serve warm with a sauce made of slightly mashed blueberries brought to a boil with enough sugar to sweeten, and a few slices of lemon; or slice like any cake and serve.

Only Men Eligible This Week In Post's Prize Recipe Contest

Salads Chosen as Theme by Food Editor; Five Cash Awards Will Be Paid to Winning Contestants.

HOW DO WASHINGTON HUSBANDS and bachelors like their salads? This is the question that Dorothea Duncan, food editor of The Post, is asking this week. And the question will be solved very shortly, for this week the theme of The Post recipe contest is salads and only men are eligible to enter their favorite recipes for this dish.

Cash awards will be offered for the five best recipes. The first prize is $5, the second, $3, and the three remaining prizes $1 each. Don't be timid about signing your name to your favorite salad recipe—don't make your wife sign her name or your recipe will be disqualified.

This is a chance for the men who do not like the salads served at their favorite restaurants or at home to come out and take a bold stand in favor of the kind they do like. The printing of the prize-winning recipes next week will prove to the public in general just what men do or do not like about salads.

To enter this contest merely write out your favorite salad recipe and send it to Dorothea Duncan in care of The Washington Post. Be sure to mail your entries in time to reach this office by Saturday morning.

Three Food Factors Listed by Scientists

Food scientists tell us that there are three important factors in what we eat. These are, first, the main constituents such as carbohydrates, proteins, etc.; second, the vitamins, and third, the tastiness or flavor. For the best nourishment all three factors should be present. The present generation of cooks is generally well schooled in the matter of food values and vitamins and chooses its menus with much greater knowledge than did our grandmothers.

In the matter of tastiness, however, grandma had a master touch that is frequently missing in our modern meals. Grandma may not have been conscious that her well-flavored dishes were stimulating the secretion of the gastric juices and so helping digestion, but she knew that they tasted good and gave folks who ate them pleasure.

This is still a good piece of knowledge to supply to our daily cooking; for while food values and vitamins nourish it is the spices, herbs and other seasoners that help us enjoy the act of nutrition.

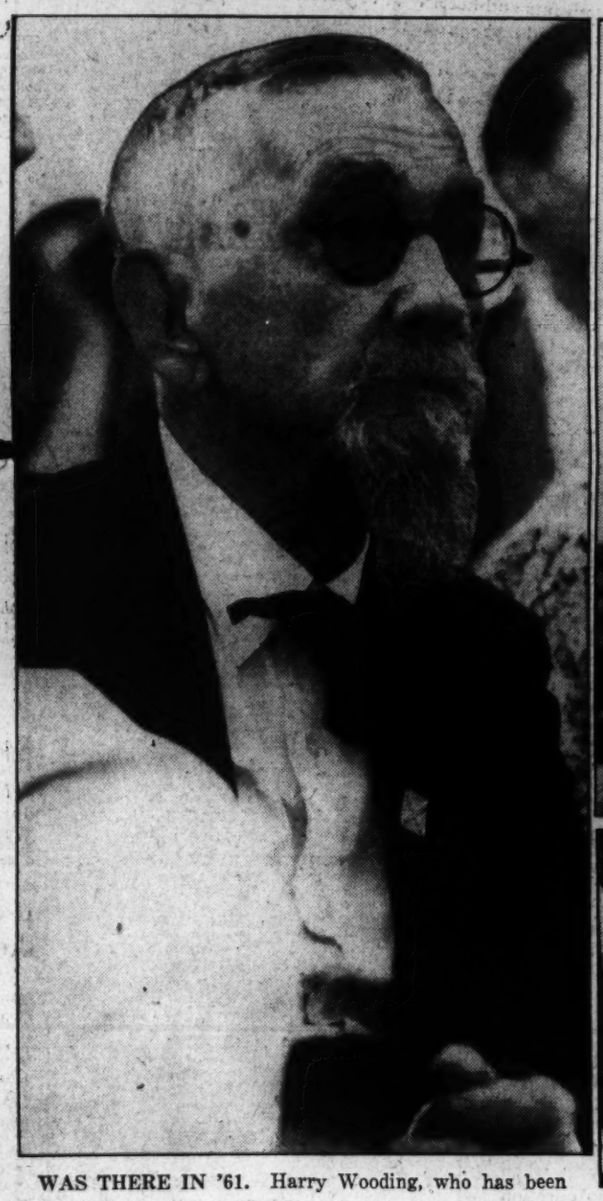
40,000 Persons Watch the Boys in Blue Routed at Manassas

PANORAMA OF THE CROWD AT MANASSAS YESTERDAY. Here is part of the huge crowd, estimated at 40,000, which traveled to Manassas, Va., yesterday to watch the Confederates stem the Union onslaught as the First Battle of Manassas was fought again after 75 years. As in the original battle, the Federal forces were turned back to Washington. No one was actually killed. Blank cartridges were used. Many kinfolk of the battle heroes were there.



WAS THERE IN '61. Harry Wooding, who has been the Mayor of Danville, Va., for the past 40 years, watches the battle in which he himself fought as a young man of 17. The aged but still active veteran was pleased with the accuracy of yesterday's battle.

GIVES THE REBEL YELL. Gen. R. M. Colvin, 91, of Company E, Eleventh Virginia Regiment, gives the rebel yell from the grandstand as Jackson's men rushed down on the Federals in the last successful charge and Stuart's cavalry charged out of the woods.

DIE AT THEIR POST. These soldiers were killed or wounded as a Confederate charge swept over the Union battery. The victorious boys in gray are in the background.

Six Are Held For Inquiry Into Shooting

Two More Sought for Questioning; Youth Wounded Twice.

Virginia Police Seize Brother of Corinna Loring's Fiance.

Five men and a woman were being held by police last night on investigation charges in connection with the shooting of Joseph Edward O'Brien, 23, of the 1000 block of Massachusetts avenue northwest, who was wounded in both legs early yesterday by gunfire from an automobile. Lookouts for two more men have been sent out and their arrest is expected today.

While promising a complete investigation of the case, Chief of Detectives Bernard M. Thompson said as yet his men had not discovered the motive for the shooting. He refused to comment on a report that the shooting was connected with an alleged hijacking of bootleg liquor.

No charges have been placed against any of those held. The woman, Viola Jennings, 21, a waitress in the restaurant near Second and Pennsylvania avenue southeast, in front of which O'Brien was standing when he was shot, was being detained as witness, Thompson said.

Two Returned Here.

Two men were returned from Fredericksburg, Va., for investigation in connection with the shooting.

The men were chased from Alexandria, Va., to Fredericksburg by State troopers. They were returned when the tag numbers of their car tallied with those given police by a witness.

Tear is out on bond now awaiting trial on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon following a mad chase around the Ellipse, behind the White House, several months ago. He is alleged to have attempted to smash into a police scout car during the chase.

Those held for investigation were Harold Joseph Sweeney, 24, of Walter Reed Hospital; James Richards, 20, of 311 New Jersey avenue southeast, and Samuel S. Montgomery, 39, of a downtown hotel.

Attack Suspect Is 'Identified' By Black Eye

Gas Victim Is Arrested After Laundry Driver Tells of Fight.

A black eye noticed by Montgomery County Police when they were investigating the near-asphyxiation of Melvin K. Royer, 4215 Leland street, Chevy Chase, Md., yesterday resulted in Royer's arrest on charges of assault with intent to murder.

Clifton Dickerson, a laundry driver, reported to police June 17 he had stopped a fight between two men in an automobile at Kenwood in which one man had cut the throat of the other with a knife. Dickerson stopped the fight and in the scuffle blacked the eye of the man with a knife, he reported.

The injured man drove his car to Mount Alto Hospital, where he was treated. He was identified later as John A. Goodwin, 4507 Ridge street, Chevy Chase, Md. Goodwin, a war veteran, had been drinking beer with the other man in a Wisconsin avenue restaurant, he told police, and in the course of the imbiding had flashed his bonus bonds.

Police sent a lookout for a man with a black eye, who otherwise generally answered the description of Royer. Two days later Royer was found in the kitchen of his home, with the gas jets on the stove wide open. He was laid out on the floor. His recumbent position probably saved his life, police said, because the gas pervades the lower areas of the room last. The man was revived by the Bethesda Rescue Squad and taken to the hospital.

Goodwin yesterday swore out the warrant against Royer and he was taken to Rockville jail. Later he posted $2,000 bond for his appearance August 10 in Montgomery County Police Court for preliminary hearing on the charges.

Grand Jury to Get Spy Charges Soon

Leslie C. Garnett, United States Attorney, said yesterday the case against John S. Farnworth, former naval officer accused of espionage, would be submitted to a grand jury as soon as he had an opportunity to study evidence accumulated by the Department of Justice.

Garnett said the case probably would not be ready before the end of the week, but in all likelihood would be submitted before July 29, the date set for the preliminary hearing by United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage.

Farnsworth, meanwhile, was still without counsel last night although it appeared that William E. Leahy, Washington lawyer, was a likely choice to conduct the defense. Leahy conferred yesterday with Ward Farnsworth, cousin of the accused man.

Buck, Ex-Broker, Is 'Out of Danger'

Benjamin R. Buck, 50, former Washington stock broker, who was found unconscious in his home Monday suffering from the effects of poisoning, was reported out of danger by Emergency Hospital physicians yesterday.

Buck pleaded guilty here in 1931 to a charge of conspiracy to operate a bucket shop. He was placed on probation.

In July, 1933, Buck was sentenced to serve three years in the Maryland House of Correction on a charge of embezzling $20,000 from a Lewistown, Pa., doctor. He was released recently.

D. C. Restaurants Warned of Racket By Fake Inspector

The ingenious fellow who eats a meal in a restaurant, then tells the cashier he is a health officer on a tour of inspection is in for a tougher time of it.

Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, acting District health officer, yesterday warned local restaurateurs to be wary of such impersonators. He said several complaints had come to the Health Department that some person, or persons, was obtaining free meals and drinks that way.

The impersonator, according to Dr. Seckinger, enters an eating establishment and announces himself as a health inspector on an official visit. He visits the kitchen, and goes through an act of seeing that everything is in order.

Then he asks for a meal, a hearty one.

When he is finished, he informs the cashier he is a health inspector. Of course, he can't show his badge—that is what has made the restaurant people suspicious.

Dr. Seckinger yesterday advised all restaurant operators to request all persons presenting themselves as food inspectors to show credentials first.

Mrs. Bube Funeral To Be Held Today

Funeral services will be held at 2:30 p. m. today at her late residence, 1233 North Carolina avenue northeast, for Mrs. Elizabeth Walson Bube, 58, wife of Simon Bube, president of the J. C. Weedon Realty Company. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mrs. Bube died at her home Monday after a long illness. She was a lifelong resident of Washington, the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Walson. She was the sister of the late George O. Walson, president of the Liberty National Bank.

She was a member of Electra Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, and of Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church. Surviving, besides her husband, is a sister, Mrs. Lavinia Cator, of Washington.

Work Is Begun Of Recording Trolley Session

Stenographers and typists for the District Public Utilities Commission set to work yesterday transcribing more than 1,600 pages of typewritten notes—the official record of the six-day hearing, concluded Monday, on the proposed ane-man street cars.

Richmond B. Keech, acting chairman of the commission, who conducted the hearing, said the finished report would contain not only a full text of the hearing, but charts and tables submitted as exhibits.

These reports will be furnished all citizens and other groups interested in the proceedings, and is expected to be of use to them in preparing briefs for the commission.

The hearing was on the street car company's proposal to add 40 one-man cars to its present fleet of 71. Several citizens groups objected vigorously.

When the hearing was concluded, counsel for the organizations that took part in the discussions were told they might submit further arguments in briefs.

There will be a ten-day period, following issuance of the hearing reports, in which to file the briefs, Keech said yesterday. The reports will be ready by the end of the week, he added.

The Public Utilities Commission, which makes the final decision in the case, will await the end of the ten-day period before resuming its study of the problem.

A month probably will pass before the commission reaches its decision, Keech said.

Labor Shortage Halts Road Work

Annapolis, Md., July 21 (AP).—The inability to obtain sufficent relief labor was said today to be preventing the construction of 3.25 miles of road designed to pass shore traffic around Annapolis. The purpose of the pass is to relieve congestion that is proving a problem to municipal authorities and the board of Anne Arundel County Commissioners.

John A. Bromley, county roads engineer, said the proposed road had been approved as a WPA farm-to-market road in 1935.

"The only reason we have not started work is the lack of available relief labor," the engineer added. "If we could get 25 men we could start work and finish the road in six months. With 50 men we could do the job in three months."

Virginia Jury Disagrees In Sunday Picture Test

Petersburg, Va., July 21 (AP).—Petersburg's first Sunday movie test case resulted in a hung jury this afternoon in hustings court. The five-man jury deliberated a half-hour and then reported it was hopelessly divided.

The test came as the result of appeals of S. H. Northington and H. Rubin, managers of two local theaters, from fines of $5 and costs imposed in police court for operating on Sunday.

Furrier Reports Theft Of $1,500 From Home

William Rosendorf, a furrier, returned home yesterday after a short absence and found that burglars who entered his residence at 5607 Sixteenth street northwest by breaking a front window had stolen $1,500 worth of jewelry and silverware, he told police.

Traffic Jams Follow Shift In Car Routes

New Lights to Be Added and Others Reset in Downtown Area.

Washington's tangled downtown traffic—heightened by the new street car rerouting system—will not return to normal for a least another month, it was predicted yesterday by Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer.

Although conditions showed slight improvement during yesterday's rush hours, many street cars were running as far as 12 minutes behind schedule and repeated jams required police aid to untangle.

Van Duzer said he expected traffic to speed up when traffic lights at various downtown intersections are reset to care for the increased traffic flow. Delays in the vicinity of Fourteenth street and New York avenue northwest, are now caused by incompleted construction work. About 150 workmen are still repaving the street where track changes were made Sunday.

Platform Changes.

Transit company officials feel conditions will improve as motormen become familiar with new routes and passengers learn of car-stop changes and new transfer points. Changes will be made in numerous loading platforms to permit more cars to take on passengers at a time.

In announcing traffic signal resettings, Van Duzer said more time will be allowed for north and south bound traffic on Fourteenth street and westbound street cars on Fourteenth street will turn from Pennsylvania avenue on a red light.

A new traffic light will be placed in operation Friday at Fifteenth and G streets and the timing cycle at Fifteenth street and New York avenue will be changed. Northbound traffic on fifteenth street will be permitted to turn into Pennsylvania avenue under the revised system.

Intermediate Change.

Richmond B. Keech, acting chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, commenting on the new changes, said:

"This is an intermediate change," he said. "Until the street car company gets its entire schedule worked out and in operation no one can tell just what these changes will mean."

Street car company men, as well as officers of the Public Utilities Commission are watching the so-called "hot-spots" to observe the congestion problems. Keech said such "spots" were at Fourteenth and New York avenue, Fifteenth and New York avenue, and Seventeenth and Pennsylvania.

"The congestion in the downtown area was aggravated Monday," Keech said, "by the fact that nearly 150 men were working at the Fourteenth street and New York avenue crossing. Until all the construction work is completed it is hard to tell even how the 'intermediate' re-routing is going to work."

Playground Group Will Go on a Hike

The excursion, the third to be conducted for the playgrounds by Donald Edward McHenry, National Capital Parks naturalist, will begin at Thirtieth and R streets northwest at 10:30 a. m. and the tramp will be through Montrose Park.

Axtell, Burrows Fail to Make Grade in Public Links Tourney.

Bethpage Golf Course, Farmingdale, Long Island, July 21.—Golf drama of the type one would expect from Hagen or Sarazen was unfolded today by frail 23-year-old Claude Rippy, of Washington, D. C., who broke a world golf record with a first-nine of 30 and tied a 31-year-old San Francisco radio policeman, Jim Molinari, for the medal in the National Public Links championship.

The "Riptide," captain of the District Harding Cup team, shot a sensational 70, two under par, to match the 36-hole total of 145 which the big California policeman, a Brooklyn-born boy, carved out earlier in the afternoon.

Jitters Handicaps Him.

Rippy trimmed five shots off his first day score of 75 and would have further shattered par had he not been seized with a first-class case of the jitters on the stretch this sunny afternoon.

Among the late starters, playing with one of the finest municipal players in the game, Charlie Ferrera, also of San Francisco, Rippy shot as if he were robot-manned for 9 holes.

He was uncanny with his drives, approaches and putts, and his shots went to their objective as if by command.

A 30—six under par—the lowest 9-hole score in the history of any national championship, conducted by the U. S. G. A., is what the mild-mannered young Rippy did today.

Is Center of Interest.

There have been 32's in national competiion, and Francis Ouimet once rattled off a 30 in a match with George Voigt in the National Amateur at Five Farms, but no professional or amateur star ever equaled his round in medal play.

When Rippy knocked his niblick second within 8 feet of the ninth hole and nailed his putt for a birdie 3 to cover the outgoing side in 3 over 3s or 6 under 4s, the gallery, officials and newspapermen raced to the tenth tee in wild confusion.

He actually had the medal locked up at this point, and could afford to go a few strokes over par, and still win out, but that could not be. It just wasn't in the books.

Gallery Rattles Him.

Having played without a gallery yesterday and for the first nine today, Rippy found himself much in the same spot Roland Hancock did eight years ago when the one-time North Carolina boy had a chance to finish 5-5 and win the National Open at Olympia Fields.

Rippy got his par at the tenth, but he topped his second on the eleventh, and took a 5, one over. He was forced to pitch dead for his par 4 on the twelfth for his 4.

Now 5 under, Rippy knocked his drive into the woods, played out safely with his second, was short in 3, and wound up with a ghastly 6, which put him 3 under.

Strain Tells.

Rippy's answer was a birdie 4 on the fourteenth, which he registered after pitching 4 feet from the pin, and holing his putt.

The strain was beginning to tell on the transplanted Shelby, N. C., boy. He was down the middle all right on the fifteenth, but his spoon second, fired into the face of a stiff wind, dropped into a trap near the green.

As Rippy prepared himself for his blast out of the trap a photographer dropped into the picture nearby, broke up the Ripper's concentration, and the Washington boy stopped his swing. When he went at it again, he played the shot weakly, three putted and took a 6.

It was now necessary for the Washington boy to finish 5—3—3 to

Newsom to Face White Sox Today

A Staff Correspondent.

Chicago, Ill., July 21.—Buck Newsom, seeking his thirteenth victory of the season, will go to the pitching mound against the White Sox tomorrow when the Nats resume their series here.

Newsom will be opposed by the right-handed Johnny Whitehead, who has a record of nine victories and ten defeats.

Capt. Buddy Myer, of the Nats, who made a pinch-hitting appearance today, is still feeling the effects of his recent illness and is not expected to rejoin the regular lineup for several days. Manager Harris will continue to use Cecil Travis at shortstop and Red Gress at second base in the absence of Myer and Ossie Bluege, who is nursing an injured rib.

Unknowns Triumph.

With Quill and Gorman smacking homers, Unknown defeated the Orioles, 6 to 3, in a St. Anthony's Softball League game at the Catholic University field yesterday. Bausch pitched for the winners.

Stage Is Set for Washington's Latest Show of Champions

Jack Dempsey, all-time champion of champions, who will referee the important contest held for the benefit of the Summer Camp Fund, sponsored by The Post.

Phil Furr, District welterweight champion, who will have the chance of a lifetime when he meets this generation's greatest fighter.

Ross, Furr Both Set For Battle Tonight; Knockout Predicted

District Contender Vesting Hopes in Potent Right, Is Confident of Winning; Champion Cool and Equally Confident of Polishing Off Foe.

By Bill McCormick.

As taut as two fiddle strings and in the snarling, savage mood of a couple of undernourished tigers, world welterweight champion Barney Ross and his immediate challenger, Phil Furr, overlord of local welterweights, will climb through the ropes at Griffith Stadium tonight and square off for what well may be the bloodiest and most thrilling prize fight ever staged in the city since or before the legalization of larrup

It will be a three-star show of champions with action expected to be of a suitable tempo, and with all-time champion Jack Dempsey acting in the role of referee The bout is officially scheduled for 10 rounds but few ring fans expect it to go the full distance A knockout ending is freely predicted, although not all agree that Furr will be on the receiving end of the sleep-producing punch

Fair Weather

A promise of fair weather from the weatherman accompanied by a brisk sale of tickets indicated the fight will draw upward of 15,000 fans and may result in a record turnout for a local bout. The promoters are able to assure proper handling of almost any kind of crowd as a new seating arrangement will permit seating of 30,000—far more than ever before have attended a boxing bout in this city

It is estimated that about 15,000 people will pour a gross of $30,000 into the coffers for the fight, which is being promoted for the benefit of the Summer Camp Fund for underprivileged children, sponsored by The Washington Post.

The contest, which is expected to draw many new fans from nearby Virginia and Maryland—places from which local fights do not often draw—will not be broadcast, either locally or on the networks. The promoters and sponsors of the bout decided against airing the engagement to help the gate receipts.

The terrific interest in the bout has been evoked by many factors. In the first place, Ross has set many records in the ring. He was the first man ever to hold the lightweight and welterweight titles simultaneously and generally is credited with being the greatest fighter in the ring today. Many will be out just to see such a fighter in action.

Then, too, Furr has the largest following of any fighter in the Capital. Many come to see him win and just as many more come to see him beaten. Both factions will be represented tonight.

Ross Worried.

Both boys are terrific punchers and the probability of a knockout one way or another has added to the general interest. Then, too, it is seldom that John Q. Public is given an opportunity of seeing a truly great fighter in action against a dangerous puncher in a fight that is not "in the bag," as the quaint expression has it.

That Ross is somewhat worried by the possibilities of an upset is evidenced by his pre-battle state-

Mooers Seeks Place For Owen (Ace) Elliott

Richmond, Va., July 20 (AP).—Owner Eddie Mooers, of the Richmond Colts, said today that he was seeking to find a place for Owen (Ace) Elliott, right-handed hurler, in the Valley or Augusta leagues.

Elliott was recently sent to the Reidsville Club in the Bi-State League but Manager Moberley of that club announced that he would be returned to Richmond.

Australian Davis Cup Team Beats Germans

By the Associated Press.

Wimbledon, England, July 21.—Australia captured the interzone final series today from Germany and will meet the cup-holding English team in the challenge round of the Davis Cup tennis competition starting Saturday.

A 6—3, 5—7, 6—4, 6—4 victory by curly-haired, red-cheeked Vivian McGrath over young Heiner Henkel put the series on ice for the Aussies. The veteran Jack Crawford then took the measure of H. Denker, 6—3, 6—1, 6—4, to make Australia's winning margin 4 to 1.

The series was marked by two injuries and as many substitutions, Adrian Quist, the lone Australian casualty, twisted his ankle in losing to Baron Gottfried von Cramm last Saturday. McGrath substituted for him.

Henkel Defaults.

Also in the opening day's play Henkel, under wraps due to a cold, slightly injured an ankle and defaulted to Crawford after dropping the first two sets. However, he appeared recovered from both today.

The second substitution occurred in the final match. Von Cramm was scheduled to meet Crawford, but the blond baron withdrew, explaining he was suffering from a recurrence of a leg injury received in the finals of the all-England championships two weeks ago. Thus Denker took his place and was easy prey for Crawford.

McGrath, who sat on the sidelines last month while his compatriots, Crawford and Quist, trimmed the United States at Philadelphia and was not expected to be played against the Germans, turned out the hero of the three-day competition. He proved an invaluable partner to Crawford in the doubles yesterday and, except for a lapse in the second set, had his singles match with Henkel well in hand at all times.

The Australians' victory over Germany makes it the first time since 1924 the Anzacs have gained the challenge round.

Thomas Stars, Browns Stop Yanks, 5-2

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, July 21.—Al Thomas handcuffed the New York Yankee sluggers with a half dozen hits today while his St. Louis Brown mates came from behind to score a 5-to-4 victory over the league leaders.

Johnny Broaca blew a three-run lead to which the Yanks had staked him in the first inning, and gave the Browns their winning margin in the eighth, when Roy Bell's single brought two tallies across the plate.

Jim Bottomley, Brown first baseman, who had previously announced he would retire, played the entire game.

The Yanks' league-lead was cut to eight games by the defeat, since the second-place Cleveland Indians won their game with Boston.

Women to Seek Diving Crown

Under the auspices of the National A. A. U., the contests will begin at 2 p. m., and continue throughout the afternoon. Other events scheduled include an inter-swim meet between Baltimore and Washington and various open events for women.

Among the entrants for the women's diving contest is Miss Betty Rhoads, representing the Newark Women's Athletic Club. Miss Rhoads is already holder of the New Jersey championship for both law and high boards.

Day Before Fight Furr Talks Self Out, into Trouble

Phil Furr, District welterweight champion who has been a stormy petrel ever since he entered the ring, could not keep out of trouble even the day before his important fight with World Welterweight Champion Barney Ross at Griffith Stadium tonight.

Yesterday it seems that Phillip parked his car in front of a fire plug while he dropped into the fight ticket office at the Annapolis Hotel to see how things were going. An officer came along to pin a ticket on the Furr chariot.

Phillip galloped out of the office to protect the vehicle. After he had identified himself, the officer was inclined to let him off with a slight chiding. Phillip, however, continued to talk—and he talked himself right into trouble.

"I'll make you real good and mad," finally decided the officer, "then you'll be nice and ugly for the fight. Come along with me."

It cost Phillip a $5 fine.

Max Formally Defies Braddock

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 21.—Developments flew thick and fast along the fistic front today:

1. Max Schmeling formally challenged James J. Braddock for the world's championship and through Promoter Mike Jacobs posted a $5,000 check with the New York State Athletic Commission as a guarantee of good faith.

2. Madison Square Garden indicated Max Baer will be its nominee when, on July 29, it must come up with a challenge for Braddock's title.

3. The Tony Canzoneri-Lou Ambers lightweight title bout, set for July 30, was again postponed, this time until August 6.

Chairman John J. Phelan said Braddock would be informed of the challenge and the commission's approval and given 15 days in which to make known his intentions. If he accepts, he must post a similar guarantee.

Joe Gould, the champ's manager, was present and said unofficially the German is acceptable to Braddock, but that he would not so write the commission until the Garden has its inning, July 29.

The commission's blessing on Schmeling's challenge took some of the wind out of the Garden's plans for a Braddock-Baer fight if the Schmeling-Braddock meeting does not eventuate.

Earlier in the day, Jimmy Johnston, Garden promoter, said he had approached Baer with a proposal to fight Braddock again, that the Californian is willing and has agreed to the challenger's end, or 12½ per cent of the gate.

"We don't know anything about that," said Chairman Phelan, "but Schmeling is the challenger. Haven't we approved him?"

"But, General, suppose the two promoters can't get together? One controls Schmeling and the other Braddock. How about a Baer fight then?" he was asked.

The Canzoneri-Ambers lightweight fight was given another postponement because the Garden insisted all the talk of a Canzoneri-Barney Ross fight had so slowed up sales another week was needed to steam up the bout.

Celebrities Converge On Stadium for Bout

Of course, Jack Dempsey, who will referee the important contest, will be on hand. He is arriving in Washington at 1:30 this afternoon and will remain in seclusion at the Carlton Hotel while not broadcasting. His radio appearances will be on stations WJSV and WMAL. He will appear on Arch McDonald's Old Pine Tree baseball game broadcast at 3:30 p. m. and with Jim McGrath on WMAL at 6:15 p. m.

Mike Jacobs, the guiding star of the Twentieth Century Club in New York, also will be a ringside spectator. He has a contract on Ross for his next title bout and has offered Furr a return bout if he beats Barney. Naturally enough, he wants to watch the boys in action.

Eddie Eagan, the famous amateur champion, who now is assistant district attorney in New York, also will come down from Gotham for the fray, as will Abe Lyman, the band leader, who is an avid fight fan. Billy Taub, tailor to most world's champions, will be on hand to see the two champions in action.

More than 25 out-of-town newspapers will be represented in the working press section. Because of the large number of scribes coming in for the fight, it has become necessary to open a large press box in the upper grandstand.

Among the more noted writers who will attend are Sid Mercer, New York; Bill Corum and Bill Farnsworth.

Wrestling Team Trials Reveal Two Stars

By Alan Gould.

Associated Press Sports Writer.

Aboard S. S. Manhattan, en Route to Berlin, July 21.—On the windswept boat deck while the liner stopped at Plymouth, England, tryouts for Uncle Sam's Olympic-bound wrestlers were conducted today and produced standout performers in two divisions.

Big and rugged Roy Dunn, national champion hailing from Gate, Okla., scored a fall over his heavyweight rival, Howell A. Scobey, jr., 1935 Lehigh University football captain and grappling star.

The other convincing and decisive exhibition was turned in by Francis E. Millard, North Adams, Mass., Y. M. C. A., featherweight, who gained a decision from chunky Fred Parkey, of Temple, Okla.

Draws in 4 Classes.

Draws resulted in the four other classes wherein the first bout in the best two out of three series was conducted to determine the United States entries at Berlin. Ben Bishop, former Lehigh wrestler, has recovered from an elbow injury suffered on shipboard and will meet his first test in the lightweight division tomorrow against Harley D. Strong, jr., of Cushing, Okla.

All bouts are limited to 15 minutes and are conducted under international regulations wherein rolling falls count.

The training routine of the other athletes was either upset or curtailed by a chilly wind. An Irish

Hat Check, Bar Chamber Maids To Sing of Nazis

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, July 21.—Barmaids, hat check girls, and chambermaids were being mobilized today to sing the praises of the New Germany to visitors to the Olympic games next month.

"You must be especially conscious of your high political responsibility," said the Bochumer Tageblatt in its call to arms.

"Look out what you tell foreigners. The impression you give them is of the highest political significance as the foreign press tried to influence them in advance against the New Germany."

The Greek delegation, arriving early today, was given a big welcome. After a little sleep the Olympic Band expected to welcome teams from Mexico, Iceland and China tonight and tomorrow.

According to word filtering into press headquarters here, America will support Finland's bid for the 1940 games.

Carl Reynolds Hits His Third Homer

By Shirley Povich.

Sports Editor of The Post.

Chicago, Ill., July 21.—Chicago's White Sox, the current upstarts of the American League, met up with Joe Cascarella this afternoon and their eight-game winning streak expired ignobly.

They didn't meet up with Cascarella until after Manager Bucky Harris, of the Nats, to his regret, had permitted Jimmy DeShong to pitch the first three innings. It was then that Cascarella made his appearance, dealt a string of zeros to the Chicago club over the rest of the route and ushered Washington into a squeaky 6-to-5 victory.

The 7,000 who hailed the return of the Sizzling Sox to Comisky Park after their triumphant tour of the East, were not long in perceiving the methods by which the Sox had amassed their eight straight triumphs. When they went to bat in the first inning, they were trailing the Nats, 4 to 0. When they had finished their turn at bat in the third, they were leading, 5 to 4.

That 4-to-0 lead the Nats gave DeShong evaporated to 4 to 2 by the end of the first inning; to 4 to 3 by the end of the second, and disappeared completely before DeShong could get 'em out in the third.

But Cascarella stopped 'em colder than an Eskimo's nose. He allowed 'em exactly four hits in those last six innings, no more than one to an inning. But it was no breeze for Cascarella. The Sox had the tying run on base in five of those last six innings, but when a hit against Cascarella could be translated into the tying run, there was no hit forthcoming against the dapper little Italian.

Cascarella had a co-hero today in Carl Reynolds who was given a place in the re-shuffled lineup of Manager Harris, who reinstated Cecil Travis at shortstop, promoted Buddy Lewis to the top of the batting order, and shifted Red Kress to second base.

Reynolds' contribution to the Nats victory took the form of his third home run of the season, a timely line drive into the leftfield bleachers that tied the score at 5-5 in the fourth inning and set the stage for the Nats to win the ball game in the fifth.

That winning run evolved after Buddy Lewis had beaten out a slow roller to Dykes and advanced to third on a pair of infield outs. At this point Ben Chapman justified his reinstatement to the clean-up

Harrisburg Upsets 16th Artillery, 9-8, to Enter Polo Semifinals

Pair of Games Listed Today At Park

Third Cavalry Yellows to Meet Strong War Department Four.

Four civilians, including a doctor, scored another upset yesterday in the United States Southeastern polo championships at Fort Myer polo field when the West Shore Country Club of Harrisburg, Pa., halted the Sixteenth Field Artillery of Fort Myer, 9 to 8, to gain the semifinal round.

The Keystone Staters joined the War Department, Third Cavalry Yellows of Fort Myer and Fort Hoyle, Md., in the round of four. An attractive double-header is lined up for today at West Potomac Park with the heavily favored Third Cavalry Yellows meeting a strong War Department four and Fauquier-Loudoun of Virginia colliding with the Quantico Marines.

The latter will be a first round consolation game. The War Department and the Third Cavalry Yellows will be battling to gain the final round of the tournament which will send its champion to the national championships in Cleveland. A handicap of seven goals will be given away by the 11-goal Third Cavalry quartet.

The goal margin which the Yellows must make up promises a red-hot conflict in view of the four fighting officers in uniform for the War Department, namely, Lieut. Tony Luebberman, Capt. Hank Reed, Maj. E. N. Harmon and Maj. L. L. Martin. The Yellows, however, gave away big handicaps in their early round matches but trounced both the Maryland Polo Club of Baltimore, 13 to 5, and the Washington Freebooters, 18 to 8.

Spotting the Pennsylvania team two goals and then attempting to make them up was too great a task for the Fort Myer team yesterday. At one time it drew up to 6-5 at the start of the fourth period and to 8-7 in the fifth chukker.

Lieut. Joe Gunahl led the offensive for the Sixteenth Field Artillery, feeding the ball upfield consistently to Lieut. Harrison King, who had a big scoring day, with four goals. Frank Frownfelder, No. 4 man for West Shore gave the visitors a much-needed two-goal lead in the last chukker to make the count 9-8.

Just before the final gong, Gunahl and Lieut. Dick Weber, led a desperate attack on the Harrisburg goal and Weber stroked through the last goal of the game. The officers had scored two goals in the fifth chukker to come up to 8-7 while holding the Pennsylvania team scoreless in that period.

bugler serenaded the athletes at dawn when the Manhattan arrived at Cobh, the first port of call. Irish, British and German correspondents boarded the ship at both ports. The Olympic flag was hauled up for the first time since leaving New York last Wednesday.

To Unload Friday.

Behind schedule now, Avery Brundage, chairman of the American Olympic committee, announced it is definitely planned to unload the Olympians at Hamburg Friday morning regardless of what time the liner makes port on Thursday.

Bill Bingham, chairman of the track and field committee, said the 1,600 meters relay combination would not be selected until just before the Olympic games got under way August 1.

However, Bingham added that Archie Williams, of Oakland, Calif., likely was the only entry in the individual 400 meters who would carry the baton. Jimmy Luvalle, of Los Angeles, and Harold Smallwood, of Ventura, Calif., who apparently has fully recovered from an attack of appendicitis, are figured not rugged enough to handle more than the solo assignments.

Jesse Owens, Ohio State's Negro sensation, after his second brisk workout in two days, said:

"I feel right for the first time since boarding the boat. My legs feel as good as ever."

Two more post-Olympic barnstorming trips were approved today. Eight track men will invade Czechoslovakia while six others will tour Sweden.

Yacht Hope Takes Mackinac Trophy

Hope, owned by Herman Karnstadt, of Fort Washington, Wis., trailed such yachts as F. H. Byrne's Lasrapid and Nathaniel Rubinkam's Rubiyat across the finish line, but her corrected time of 64:33:33 gave her the prized Mackinac Trophy in the racing-cruising division.

Rippy Rising in Golf World

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Claude Rippy, District municipal golfer competing in the national public links championship, literally is rising in the golf world as the above picture attests. His stock took a figurative rise for a short time before the photo was made when he turned in a scorching 30 for the first nine holes and finished with a 70—2 under par, in the second round of play. Left to right are Pat Axtell, Ted Burrows and Bob Burns, with Rippy aloft. All are from Washington.

3 Ritzenbergs Advance in 4 Net Events

All Go to Semifinals; Nate Moves Up in Doubles in Public Play.

By John R. Vosburgh.

The three Ritzenberg brothers took over various places in the semifinal rounds of the annual Public Parks tennis championships yesterday, but Nate, as usual, went one up on Hy and Allie by taking two places.

Not only pairing with Allie to gain the doubles semifinals, Nathan slapped a 6—4, 6—4 on Morgan (Happy) Jacobs to gain the round of four in the singles. The victory was unusually satisfactory to the victor for Nate had spoken with no hesitation concerning what he would do if and when he met Mr. Jacobs.

The latter offered some first-class opposition, however, staking Nate to a 4—1 lead in the first set and then pulling up to 4—4 with one of the most impressive streaks of the tournament. Jacobs' brilliant rally faded out, however, and Nate's steady ball retrieving and strategy finally pulled out the set.

In the second chapter games went on service until the tenth and Nate had match point five times before winning it. Eight double-faults failed to help his cause, but his ground game and net tactics were good enough to offset this deficit. Ritzenberg was seeded No. 2 and Jacobs No. 7.

Nate is now one jump ahead of the field. Three quarter-final matches will be played today with Allie Ritzenberg, No. 4 seeded player, meeting big Herb Shenkin in the feature struggle. Shenkin, unseeded "dark horse" has yet to lose a set. Ray Stocklinski, seeded No. 3, collides with Billy Contreras, seeded No. 6, and Pate Deck, the No. 1 seeded man, faces Arthur Simmons.

Sara Moore, the defending women's champion, vanquished Dorothy Bergstrom, 6—0, 6—1, to gain the semifinals and will meet Peggy Keyser Smith, left-handed ace now making a successful comeback, at 11 a. m. today. Mrs. Dorette Miller gained the finals by defeating Mrs. Frances Walker Bassett, 6—3, 4—6, 6—1. Mrs. Bassett, one of the District's top-ranking players of a few years ago, gave her veteran opponent a stubborn fight, but tired in the last set.

wrest the medal from the California cop, for no one else in the field had a chance.

Things looked dark when Rippy dumped his second into a trap on the sixteenth, but he played out beautifully, and was down for his par 5.

On the seventeenth a short, tricky one, Rippy knocked his spoon shot way to the left of the green in rough, chipped much too weak, failing to reach the carpet, and he saved himself by canning a 4-footer for a 4.

Told that he needed his birdie to tie for the medal, Rippy poured everything he had into his drive and approach. His second shot was anchored 15 feet to the left of the pin, and to the cheers of the day's largest gallery, Rippy rolled in his putt for a birdie 3—his eighth birdie of the day.

Rippy's 30-40—70 not only was one of two of the lowest scores made in his championship—a young San Antonio boy, Lee Brandt, jr., made the other 70, but set a new competitive course record.

Rippy's first nine score with par:

Out par ..... 4 4 5 3 4 4 3 5 4—36
Rippy ..... 3 4 4 3 3 4 2 4 3—30

Only 28 Putts.

Rippy used up only 28 putts for the 18 holes—only 11 on that history-making first 9.

Another Washington golfer, Bobby Burton, qualified for match play tomorrow with 75—78—153, one shot within the charmed circle of 64. Eleven golfers with 154 played-off for seven places this evening.

Burton went out in 37, two over, and would never have made the grade had he not deuced the seventeenth, for on the previous hole, Burton took a five, and on the eighteenth he took a five for a 41.

The other two members of the Washington Harding Cup team—Ted Burrows and Pat Axtell—failed. Burrows went sky-high with an 83 to finish with 160, and Axtell duplicated his first day round of 82.

Hendrix Loses in Longwood Net Upset

Hunt, Tourney Baby, Wins After Being 2 Down; Sutter Defeated.

By the United Press.

Chestnut Hill, Mass., July 21.—Plucky tow-headed Joe Hunt, of Los Angeles, "baby" of the tournament, fought back from the sheer edge of certain defeat today to beat Arthur Hendrix, of Lakeland, Fla., seeded star, in the biggest upset of the third round of the historic Longwood Bowl tournament.

Under the wiltering rally of the 17-year-old California star, Hendrix, who led two sets straight, fell 4—6, 3—6, 6—4, 6—3, 6—3. The break came in the third set when Hunt, four games down and the points love-30 against him, took four straight points to win the game, then captured the next five games to win the set.

Major Upset.

In the only other major upset, Ernie Sutter, of New Orleans, intercollegiate champion, was eliminated 7—5, 7—5, by Al Jarvis, of Tenafly, N. J., in the playoff of yesterday's uncompleted second round match. Jarvis, a towering Williams College sophomore, gained the quarter-finals by defeating Peter Blanchard, of New York, 6—3, 3—6, 6—3 and 6—2.

The "name" players, Frankie Parker, of Lawrenceville, N. P., and Wilmer Hines, of Columbia, S. C., came through without trouble. Parker appeared the class of the tournament, as far as form is concerned, playing faultless tennis to beat Burtz Boulware, of Jacksonville, Fla., 6—1, 6—1, 6—1.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Chicago, Ill., July 21.

It was from here one evening four years ago that the press wires flashed to the prize-fight world the amazing fact that Chicago's Barney Ross had punched out a 15-round decision over Featherweight Champion Tony Canzoneri. Chicagoans exulted, fight fans the Nation over were given to skepticism.

POVICH.

Barney Ross was only a local pride, his fame limited to the Midwest, while Canzoneri was far and away the best fighting man in his division, a worthy holder of the world's championship. Chicago's habit of rendering home-town decisions was somewhat famous and thus it was that the Nation's fight fans were not willing to accept Ross as a top-notcher.

And besides, the fight was close. Even the officials who rendered the decision in favor of Ross admitted that. And if Chicagoans made the admission then the identity of the true winner was very much open to doubt.

But the man who could beat Canzoneri, under any conditions was an attraction and Madison Square Garden quickly snapped up the return bout. They would put it on in New York, Canzoneri's adopted home town, and let this interloper Ross fight Canzoneri for the title. Their Chicago match had been an over weight affair in which Canzoneri had not risked his crown.

That was all right with Ross, apparently. His managers leaped at the chance for a return fight in New York. What happened in that battle is history. Ross beat the champion ever more decisively, won his title, and definitely launched the career that was to win him recognition as the greatest fighting man, inch for inch and pound for pound in the world.

Washington's Phil Furr is almost equally as little-known as was Ross on that evening here four years ago in which Ross beat the champion. Tomorrow night at Griffith Stadium when he meets Ross in a bout for the benefit of the Washington Post's camp for underprivileged children, Furr will be cast identically as was Ross in that first Canzoneri battle—a local pride against the world champion of his weight.

Furr, at 4 to 1 in his fight with Ross, is no more an under-dog than was Ross in his first battle with a champion. And Canzoneri, then like Ross now, was deemed virtually invincible. But Ross won that night and it is a shining precedent that he set for Furr. It can happen.

Pair of Titlists Win, to Vie for Net Title

Willie O'Steen and Lucille McDowell Play Today at Chevy Chase.

In true championship style, a pair of champions gained the final round of the girls' District playground tennis tournament yesterday. Winning in straight sets, Willie O'Steen, of Virginia Avenue, the defending champion, and Lucille McDowell, of Burroughs, coholder of the doubles championship, zoomed through their semifinal tests and will meet for the title today at 10 a. m., at Chevy Chase.

Keeping intact her record of not losing a set throughout the tourney, the hard-hitting lassie from Virginia Avenue defeated formidable Charlotte Decker, of Janney, 6—3, 7—5, to make herself a slight choice to win the title for the second straight year.

Stocky Miss McDowell earned her final round bracket with an impressive conquest of Hazel (Jimmy) Bishopp, of Takoma Park, 6—1, 3—6.

Lucille's strong stroking and fighting spirit figured largely in the victory and the possibility of Miss O'Steen's winning again in straight sets today appears dim, according to the way the Burroughs girl was hitting yesterday.

Overcoming an early attack of stage fright, Miss Bishopp, 15-year-old Tech High senior playing in her first tournament, came back in the second set to take a lead of 6—5. At this juncture, she came two points from taking the set, but Miss McDowell rallied gamely, tied the score at 6-all by breaking Miss Bishopp's service, held her own and then broke Miss Bishopp's again for the match.

Aneroid Captures Purse at Suffolk Downs, Returns $33.40

Liberal Is 2d As 10,000 Watch

Black Mistress Is Third, as Outsider Bests Favored Entry.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, July 21.—Edward Bruner's lightly regarded Aneroid smashed home to a half-length victory in the Suffolk Purse, today's 6-furlong feature at Suffolk Downs, to return $33.40 to a few pari-mutuel supporters in the crowd of 10,000.

The favored Log Cabin Stud's Liberal placed a length and a half in front of H. T. Archibald's Black Mistress. Fourth, a length back, came J. U. Gratton's Grog, making his first start of the year. Liberal's place price was $3.40 and the show horses's price for that spot was $2.80.

The winner turned the sprint distance in 1:11.2 on an off track after being held off the early pace, set by Liberal and Sadie F. Aneroid raced to victory down the outside of the stretch and had too much left for Liberal. Black Mistress and Grog both moved up during the run to the wire.

Christmas Horse Scores.

Chicago, July 21 (AP).—Sunned from the stable of B. F. Christmas, of Baltimore, Md., ridden by Jockey Basil James, galloped to a surprise victory in the feature event at seven furlongs at Arlington Park this afternoon.

After trailing the field during the early running of the race Sunned opened up to flash by the judges three lengths in front of Mrs. G. H. Emick's Brandon Prince and his stable companion Recovery.

Sunned ran the distance in 1:24 1-5. Mutuels paid $12.80 to win, $5.60 to place and $4.80 to show.

BULLFINCH, outpaced for the first three furlongs, moved up gradually thereafter and closed going stoutly. HATS OFF was a prominent factor the entire trip. BUSBY made up some ground. PROSY had good speed for the first five furlongs, stopping badly in the closing stages. FORCED LANDING, away slowly, moved up fast in the first quarter mile then retired steadily. PRAIRIE PRINCE, hard ridden from the start, did not begin to move up until after rounding the far turn, swung to the outside in the stretch, closed with a rush and drew out under hard urging. ROMNEY ROYAL displayed good speed, was under punishment to wear down AMHURST from the lead and while holding on well, was no match for the winner in the closing test. EARLY SETTLER, well placed, was unable to reach the leaders under pressure. JACK PINE was slow to begin, was moving up fast when Longden had to take up when blocked, was taken to the outside, moved up fast and loomed up menacingly nearing the stretch and weakened from his early efforts through the last furlong. AMHURST showed good speed only to falter in the last three-sixteenths.

TAKUS was prominent all the way and while no match for the winner, held on gamely to the close. HIDDEN DUST, well up all the way, held on gamely to the end. TORNADIC, slow to begin and outrun down the backstretch, never could threaten the leaders. ATONEMENT II was unable to improve his position under pressure. HARRY'S DREAM, well up, moved through on the inside at the stretch turn, gained command when SPRING'S HERE tired, though unable to cope with the closing bid of the winner. JEANNE FETZKO, unable to keep up, was bumped entering the stretch, recovered gamely and closed with good energy. SUGABOOT was unable to reach the leaders. TRAITRESS was going willingly at the close. Giants Defeat Cards, 2 to 1 In Tenth

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 21.—Dizzy Dean served one home-run ball too many to the Giants today, and the St. Louis Cardinals lost a ten-inning 2-to-1 decision in the opener of their current Eastern tour.

Dick Bartell poled one of Dean's slants into the leftfield stands in the last of the tenth to break up a pitchers' duel and give Carl Hubbell the decision over Dizzy for the Giant ace's thirteenth victory.

Although the Gas House Gang outhit their New York rivals, 9 to 5, Hubbell was tight in the pinches, and the defeat set the Cards back two full games behind the league-leading Chicago Cubs.

All the run making came on homers, with Gus Mancuso's four-bagger in the fifth scoring the Giants' first run, and Pepper Martin's round-tripper in the sixth counting the Cards' only tally.

Copper Raised To 9¾ Cents, Top Since 1931

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 21.—Leading producers today advanced the domestic price of copper 9¾ cents a pound from the 9½-cent level which has been in effect since February. This is the highest level for copper since 1931 both for domestic and foreign metal.

Today's advance was foreshadowed by a large increase in demand starting last Friday. For the past fortnight the foreign market has been exceptionally active at rising prices.

The mark-up was initiated by Phelps-Dodge Corporation, one of the largest producers. Anaconda Copper Mining Co. also lifted its price to 9¾ cents.

American Smelting & Refining Co. is leaving its quotation at 9½ cents today, but will meet the advance tomorrow, a spokesman for the company said. It was expected that other producers would do likewise, making the 9¾-cent level uniform tomorrow.

Selling quarters described buying as the best in some time with various important consuming industries asking for large tonnages. Increased demand was attributed in copper circles to the expanded activities in several heavy industries. Utility buying was said to be fair.

In the export market the recent revival of demand was ascribed to Great Britain's armament program and to large calls from France and Russia.

Stocks Move Up Briskly in Late Trading; Copper Marked Up; Grains Higher.

New York, July 21.—With sales again around 1,500,000 shares the stock market recovered in late afternoon from early meekness and closed with a good deal of buoyancy in some sections, notably the motors. Commodities also were higher. September wheat closed ⅝ of a cent up at 103⅝ cents a bushel. Corn sold around the upper limit for the day's trading at Chicago. Government bonds worked higher.

Popular fancy in stocks turned to the medium to high priced issues. Chrysler was the leader, rising to a new high price. It brought fresh buying in the other motor shares. General Motors also sold at a fresh price, but its gain was moderate. Coca-Cola was one of the hundred class to develop buoyancy, touching a new high record figure for the present shares. Philip Morris also began to climb rapidly.

Copper shares were firmer for a while on the posting of a quarter of a cent increase in metal prices, but their action was rather disappointing. The electrics, on the other hand, were strong. General Electric in the afternoon trading was one of the most active stocks and rose to a new high price. Public utilities were unable to do much, nor were the rails conspicuous, although a few found good demand. Consolidated Edison gave up yesterday's point gain.

Southern Pacific led the rails, rising a point to a new high level on large sales. Santa Fe and Delaware & Hudson were lifted a point. Central was firm and Northern Pacific advanced. At the odd lot post the Cotton Belt issues were the best performers, Chesapeake & Ohio and the Alleghany stocks dropped a little. Rail equipments were uncertain.

Rubber shares were uniformly higher, and great activity was reported in them on the Amsterdam exchange. Gains averaged a point. Oils were inclined to drag a little. Metals held firm to fractionally higher. Anaconda re-crossed 40 for the first time in five years. United States Smelting, scraping bottom for some time, recovered 3 points.

Unwary shorts were caught in Case. Heartened by the better crop reports, the bulls in the issue rushed the stock up 7 points. Deere and Harvester were rather quiet. Some attention was given the low-grade copper issues, on the belief that prices might go high enough to give them some profits. Motor Lode changed hands in large volume without price fluctuations.

Some stocks ordinarily active in speculative operations were inconspicuous. American Can and Allied Chemical made their first appearance on the ticker tape toward the final trading hour. Can was strong. Steel common moved up a little, but it was rather backward most of the day.

Firmer Money.

Interest in the money market was centered in the rate announced for the latest Treasury discount bill offering. The price was the equivalent of an interest rate of .115 per cent. That compares with .071 per cent for the previous issue and with .067 per cent for the one before that. Dealers attached some significance to the advance, which, they felt, taken in connection with the recent rise in acceptance bill rates and with the call for a 50 per cent increase in member bank reserve requirements, as of August 15, indicated a definite passing of the low point in money rates.

Probably the rate would have been even higher were it not for the demand from Chicago banks for the bills. The bills are accumulated there for resale to corporations this autumn for the purpose of putting cash into securities, and thereby lessening the effect of the moneyed capital tax in effect there. Possibly also the demand for such purpose was even greater on the previous bill offering.

Meanwhile, many of the larger banks here plan to increase their cash reserves between now and August 15, in anticipation of the higher reserve requirements. They will do that mainly by allowing their holdings of maturing Treasury discount bills to run off without replacement. Inasmuch as the large banks have no way of knowing to what extent correspondents, caught short in reserves under the new rule, will draw down their balances, some precautions must be taken.

Uncertainty.

In turn, many of the New York bank correspondents are depositaries for smaller institutions, and they must also prepare. If that process goes far, it will mean that the Treasury will have to find some new bill buyers. The effect, in that case, upon the bill market will be closely watched. All which calls to mind that, although the new policy may work out all right, it certainly is a fresh element of uncertainty at a time when it might better have been avoided.

Trade news was not of major importance, but it was mostly favorable. The leading mail order concerns reported increased sales and expectant demand, and hope of improvement in business in the West this autumn definitely has risen with the heavy rains that recently have fallen over the drought areas. Industrial earnings statements continue to pour in, with a general increase in profits shown. Railroads also are reporting higher earnings for June.

Foreign exchanges were dull with virtually no change in sterling and francs. Spanish currency was supported.

Correction.

In the Treasury daily statement for July 11 debt retirement for the then elapsed period of the 1936-1937 fiscal year was incorrectly stated in The Post as $27,591,450, which was the amount of debt redemption for the July 1-11 portion of the fiscal year 1936. For the first 11 days of the fiscal year 1937, which begins July 1, 1936, debt retirement was $1,884,250. During the first month of the fiscal year columns 1 and 3 on the Treasury daily statement are identical and columns 2 and 4 are identical. This identity disappears during the remaining 11 months.

Banking Position.

Changes in the statements of member banks in Chicago and other Western cities dominated the weekly figures of reporting member banks in 101 cities as of July 15. Demand deposits adjusted rose $35,000,000 in San Francisco and $16,000,000 each at Boston, Chicago and Kansas City, the expansion for all the banks being $116,000,000. Loans on securities to others than brokers increased $43,000,000 in Chicago, while bank holdings of Government direct obligations in the Chicago district went up $28,000,000. New York banks added $38,000,000 of Government direct obligations to their portfolios. Changes in other loans and securities were not important. Loans and investments of all reporting banks were up $52,000,000 on the week and reserves were up $45,000,000. Deposits of domestic banks increased $80,000,000, al the increase being in New York.

United Air Sets Traffic Record For Half Year

Passengers Gain 15%, Express 50% and Mail 11%.

Chicago, July 21.—A new record for air passenger, mail and express traffic for the first six months of any year was established by United Air Lines for the period ended June 30, W. A. Patterson, president, announced today. Revenue passengers increased 15 per cent, air express 50 per cent, air mail 11 per cent, and mileage 20 per cent, over the same period of last year.

During the six months United carried 91,830 revenue passengers, 1,040,482 pounds of express, and 2,661,144 pounds of mail. Total miles flown were 7,833,635, additional mileage being necessary to care for increased business. In the corresponding period last year, United carried 80,030 revenue passengers, 692,685 pounds of express, and 3,388,158 pounds of mail, and flew 6,544,504 miles.

At the present time United is flying 30 per cent of the passenger-miles in the United States, 36 per cent of the air mail pound-miles and 42 per cent of the air express pound-miles, Mr. Patterson said. For the first time in the company's history, its air express tonnage, which gained 50 per cent, is now nearly one-half as great as air mail tonnage.

United is operating 50 three-mile-a-minute twin-engined transports and is taking delivery of additional equipment within 60 days.

Dried Fruits Steady.

Curb Prices Firm; Metals in Demand

New York, July 21 (AP).—A steady to firm tone prevailed at the close in the curb market today with metal shares leading other groups. The appearance of small-scale profit taking in the late stages of the session failed to demoralize the main list, although some shares eased from their earlier highs.

Metal shares were firm throughout the day. Hudson Bay Mining gained 7/8 to 25⅞. Newmont Mining, 2 to 90½ and Hecla, ½ to 12. Niagara Hudson, another star, moved up 1¼ to 15⅜. The advance in copper prices was the mainspring o fbullish enthusiasm.

Pan American Airways, following an early reversal, firmed to 57, off ½. Other stocks closing lower included American Cyanamid "B" off ½; American Gas & Electric, off ⅝; and Northern States Power "A," off ¾.

Boston Wool Market.

Boston, July 21 (AP).—(United States Department of Agriculture.)—Buyers for mills and top-makers were making inquiries for wool here today, but their purchases were very light because bids were mostly below the general asking prices. A little fine territory wool in original bags, described as just average French combing length, was sold at around 82@83 cents, scoured basis. Most of the sizable offerings of average to good French combing length territory wools in original bags were held at 85 cents, scoured basis, although limited quantities were available at 83@85 cents.

Greenbelt s Win On Clapper's Home Run

Down Brewers, 9-7; Babe Swats One—Bases Full in 8th.

A home run with the bases full by Rightfielder Clapper gave the Resettlement Greenbelts a 9-7 victory over the Heurich Brewers yesterday in an Industrial League game likely to determine the second-half championship. It was the Greenbelt's second victory over the first-half champions.

Trailing 6 to 2, going into the eighth, Walter Beall, Watts and Myers, of the Greenbelts, singled in a row to knock Everett Russell, Heurich pitcher, out of the box. Lefty James relieved him and fanned Smith and forced Lennox to fly out to left field. Clapper swung on a fast ball, however, for a round-tripper and Beall, Watts and Myers scored ahead of him.

Medwick Ties Record For Consecutive Hits

New York, July 21 (AP).—"Ducky" Medwick, St. Louis Cardinals' leftfielder, tied the National League record for consecutive hits by getting a double and two singles in his first three times at bat against the Giants today, bringing his total to ten.

The record, one short of the major league mark set by Tris Speaker in 1920, tied the mark made first in the National League by Ed Delehanty, of Philadelphia, in 1897, and equalled since then by Ed Konetchy, of Brooklyn, in 1919; Kiki Cuyler, while with Pittsburgh in 1925, and Chick Hafey, with the Cardinals in 1929.

Sarron to Risk Title Against Manuel

Both Fighters Predict a Knockout in Dallas Encounter Today.

By the Associated Press.

Dallas, Tex., July 21.—Chunky Petey Sarron, the "Dixie windmill," risks his National Boxing Association featherweight title here tomorrow night in a 15-round bout with cocky left-handed Baby Manuel of Cuba.

The 28-year-old Birmingham Syrian, who rose from the sidewalks of the Alabama industrial center to the championship will be making his first defense of his title in Texas' first championship bout under legalized boxing.

Sarron pits his busybody tactics, which won him the title from Freddie Miller, against a cold, rangy southpaw who shoots wicked body punches from close range. The champion, months before he won the title, won a 10-round decision over Manuel at Miami, Fla.

Manuel since has developed a sharp abdomen punch which has made him a Texas favorite. Sarron, dependent upon his bounding, flailing tactics for points, has shown a hard right-cross in workouts. Both fighters have predicted a knockout before the twelfth round.

Promoter Griffin announced tonight he expected a capacity crowd of nearly 7,000 and $12,000 gate.

Invitations Mailed Out For Sandlot All-Star Tilt

A total of 3,500 official invitations were sent out yesterday by President Joe Cohen of the Columbian Juvenile Baseball Leagues to attend the annual all-star game at Griffith Stadium between a picked squad of Columbians and an all-star team from the Washington Boys Club League.

The all-star insect game will be played Friday and the all-star pee-wee classic, a week from Friday for the city championship in their respective classes. President Cohen yesterday picked the 24 members of the Columbian squad after watching the five picked players from each team in the league work out.

Sarron Is Scheduled To Fight in Richmond

Richmond, Va., July 21 (AP).—Petey Sarron, the National Boxing Association's featherweight boxing champion of the world, is tentatively scheduled to fight on the Richmond police benefit show to be held at the City Stadium here, September 16.

Joe Bauers, secretary of the Virginia State Boxing Commission, who has been appointed matchmaker for the police show, talked with Jimmy Erwin, Sarron's manager, by long-distance telephone tonight and was assured that Sarron would appear here on the police card.

Roosevelt Ship Sails 28 Miles; Weather Foggy

Sewanna and Her Escorts Find Rough Sea and Resort to Motors.

By the Associated Press.

Aboard Schooner Liberty, Off Cape Sable, N. S., July 21.—After a delayed start due to a close-shore fog, President Roosevelt sailed his vacation schooner Sewanna southwestward 28 miles from Cape Negro Island, eastern Nova Scotia, today and dropped anchor tonight in lower Wood Harbor, near Cape Sable.

This was approximately the same anchorage the Sewanna used last Friday night after a 30-hour run from Seal Harbor, Me.

Yarmouth, on the southwest coast of this North Atlantic province, was the original destination tonight, but due to the belated start it was not expected to be reached until tomorrow.

Waiting for the weather to clear, the sailing Roosevelts did not pull anchor until around 1:30 o'clock, daylight time, this afternoon. Leaving Cape Negro Island the Sewanna and her three escorts, the destroyer Hopkins, U. S. S. Potomac and the press boat Liberty, tossed heavily in a ground swell.

The sailing vessels Sewanna and Liberty used motor power all the way. The Hopkins, because of poor visibility, left the flotilla as soon as the Atlantic Ocean was reached and ran ahead to set up a course mark off Cape Sable Light buoy.

Today marked the beginning of the second week of the Roosevelt cruise. The Sewanna left Pulpit Harbor, Me., the morning of July 24.

From now on the course lies northwestward up the west coast of Nova Scotia, with Campobello Isle, New Brunswick, where the Presidents' mother has a summer home, the ultimate destination.

The President has arranged to debark there July 28, spend a couple of days and then leave St. Andrews, New Brunswick, by special train for Quebec for a good neighbor call on Lord Tweedsmuir, Canada's Governor-General.

Extradition Asked For Two Dulings

Richmond, July 21 (AP).—Gov. Peery approved requisition papers today for the extradition of Hubbard and Paul Duling from West Virginia to Virginia and mailed the papers to Gov. Kump.

The men are being held at Beckley, W. Va., on charges of slaying Deputy Sheriff Clarence Simmons in Roanoke County.

They were arrested at their homes near Summersville, W. Va., yesterday. Hubbard, 34, and Paul, 28, brothers, denied any knowledge of the early morning shooting of the deputy as he was driving his car near Roanoke.

Edward H. Richardson, Roanoke County Commonwealth's attorney, said the brothers had been "positively identified" as occupants of the machine from which the hail of buckshot had been fired at Simmons.

Extortion Plot In Georgia Laid To Landowner

Letter Threatening Death to Bankers Charged by U. S. Agents.

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, July 21.—The Department of Justice charged a man listed as J. S. Corbin, 67, of Buford, Ga., today with writing a $50,000 extortion letter threatening death to members of a wealthy north Georgia family.

The complaint, filed by A. Hale Watkins, special Department of Justice agent, said the unsigned letter was written to J. G. Allen, of Buford, in 1935.

Watkins told acting United States Commissioner E. Brown that Corbin was arrested July 9 at Buford on a charge of trespassing on a tannery of the Allen family.

The complaint said the letter threatened death for Bona Allen, jr., J. O. Allen, Kate Allen Shadburn, V. H. Allen, J. Loss Shadburn, C. J. Purkle and L. T. Sudderth, all directors in the Shadburn Banking Co., which is controlled by the Allen family, and E. A. Wilbanks, cashier.

An authoritative source said the Shadburn bank had foreclosed on property owned by Corbin, who was formerly a real estate operator.

1. Find the apartment that meets your requirement—in the section in which you want to live.

2. Note the key letters and the number at the end of the ad. For example: D-5.

3. Then find the letter of the alphabet (in this case, D) at the top of the map. This means the apartment is located somewhere between the D at the top and the D at the bottom of the map.

4. Then look for the numeral (in this case, 5) at either side of the map. Where the D and 5 meet is the vicinity in which the apartment is located.

YOU'LL FIND THAT THE BEST APARTMENTS ARE LISTED IN THE CLASSIFIED COLUMNS OF THE POST

Roosevelt Men Receive G. O. P. Plea for Funds

Feels Honor Keenly, Says Roberts, But Asks Them to Join His Side.

The drive of District of Columbia Republicans to raise campaign funds reached several District officials yesterday, among them People's Counsel William A. Roberts, a Roosevelt appointee.

Roberts and others, including Vernon L. West, acting corporation counsel, and Richmond B. Keech, vice chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, received letters from Paul E. Lesh, president of the local Landon and Knox Campaign Club. An application for membership in the club was attached, and the letter asked for a payment of "dues."

West and Keech said they tossed their letters into the waste basket. West, appointed under a Republican administration, said he has contributed to neither party. Keech is a Roosevelt appointee.

Roberts, however, replied with a letter in which he told Lesh he felt "highly favored and honored" by the invitation to join the Republican club.

Feels Honor Keely.

"I feel this honor keenly because my own Party has never solicited contributions from me, certainly not in the District Building," he wrote.

"However, if you will refer to your research committee, I believe you will find that I was appointed as People's Counsel by Franklin Delano Roosevelt in May, 1934, and strange as it may seem was an acknowledged Democrat even when the lamented President Hoover dictated the policies of the country.

Roberts added that although he was "sufficient of a joiner to be tempted by almost any invitation toward additional fraternal affiliations, I must confess I could never subscribe to the purposes of your organization.

Glad to Have Them.

"If, after careful and methodical circularization of all the District officers, you find yourself unable to secure a quorum for the Landon and Knox Campaign Club, may I suggest that you abandon your enterprise and I will gladly afford you membership in my own "Franklin Delano Roosevelt for President Association," contributions for which would be solicited—outside Government buildings."

Lesh explained that letters, like the one Roberts received, had been sent "all persons whom our committee thought might be interested in supporting Landon and Knox."

"If we got hold of the names of any loyal supporters of the present Administration, it was by mistake. We didn't mean any offense."

Chambersburg Guards Depleted Water Supply

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chambersburg, Pa., July 21.—Borough officials yesterday clamped drastic restrictions on use of water due to the depleted supply in the Dull Hill reservoir, three miles east of town and mid-way station between the town and the source of supply in the South Mountain above Calendonia.

Locomotives of the Pennsylvania and Western Maryland lines will not be permitted to take on water here, industrial consumption was cut 50 per cent, and domestic consumers were forbidden to sprinkle lawns, flower gardens, wash pavements or automobiles until the emergency has passed.

The Dull Hill reservoir normally holds 2,500,000 gallons, but within the past week the supply has been reduced to 1,000,000.

St. Marys Man Will Attend Landon Rally

Elmer Jarboe Is Added to Maryland Group for Notification.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 21. — Another name—that of Elmer Jarboe, of St. Marys County—was added today to the list of Maryland Republicans who will attend the Landon notification ceremony in Topeka Thursday night.

Twenty other persons, led by the "big three" of the party in the State, already had made plans to leave Baltimore on a special train for Kansas tonight.

Gov. Harry W. Nice, National Committeeman O. E. Weller and State Chairman William P. Lawson led the score of Marylanders. These three will attend a luncheon given by Alf M. Landon, Republican Presidential nominee, in Topeka Thursday. Later they will attend a dinner given by the Topeka Chamber of Commerce for the guests at the notification.

Galen Tait, former internal revenue collector here and a party leader in years past, preceded the larger party by 24 hours. Tait, who had dealings with the Landon forces before the Kansas Governor was nominated, left for Topeka last night.

Other Marylanders who made reservations to accompany the Governor on the trip were:

State Budget Director W. H. Blakeman and Mrs. Blakeman; Charles Stewart and J. Wilson Ryon, of Prince Georges County; Senator O. Straugh Lloyd, of Wicomico County, candidate for the House of Representatives; Senator Harry W. Legore, of Frederick County, also a Congressional candidate; Magistrates William J. Stocksdale and Luly Powell, of Baltimore.

Henry Lay Duer, commissioner of labor statistics, and treasurer of the State committee; Judge Marion Humphreys, of Salisbury; Walter O. Landon; Sherman Flannigan, of Westminster; State Librarian John McCool, of Elkton; J. George Eierman, president of the Baltimore board of election supervisors; Walter McLean, a member of the board; J. Glenn Beall, of Frostburg, and Harry Willis, of Kent County.

Murder Suspect Held Pending Investigation

Waynesboro, Va., July 21 (AP).—Raymond Carroll, arrested Sunday on a charge of fatally assaulting Pauline Parry here in 1934, remained in August County Jail while Waynesboro Police Chief R. L. Chief Switzer said all members of the local force were engaged in further investigation of the case.

The girl died three months after being struck on the head, dragged into a nearby churchyard and left mortally wounded in August, 1934.

Choice of Steele Draws Air Protest

Richmond, Va., July 21 (AP).—Appointment of R. E. Steele as director of aviation for the State Corporation Commission drew a protest from the Virginia Aeronautical Association today and a recommendation that J. D. Driskill, Fort Eustis transport pilot, be named in his place.

The protest, made in an open letter to Gov. Peery which was made public in Norfolk, immediately brought a statement from Commissioner H. Lester Hooker in defense of Steele's appointment by the commission last week.

The associtaion letter, bearing the signature of J. H. Dubuque, secretary-treasurer, declared that while Steele was a "very capable man," the association felt that "his unfamiliarity with aviation, his lack of nechnical knowledge of airport design and construction, the structure of airplanes and the nature of pilots in general, makes him totally unfit for this important position.

Veterans Hear Plea to Assist U. S. Economy

Hines Asks Disabled Ex-Soldiers to Use Caution in Benefit Plans.

By the Associated Press.

Milwaukee, July 21.—Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, administrator of the Veterans Administration, urged the Disabled American Veterans convention today to be cautious in making any recommendations for increased benefits to former soldiers.

Stating that he did not know what plans the convention might have for seeking liberalization of benefits, Hines said that "while the obligation to the veterans has been met, the Government still has an obligation to its creditors which must be met."

"In recognition of the consideration which the Congress has given to the welfare of veterans directly and indirectly through making it possible for them to participate in beneficial legislation enacted in behalf of all of our citizens, it is my firm conviction that it will be to the interest of the veterans as well as the Government to approach the formulation of any recommendations for increased benefits at this time with consideration of what has been and is being done and with that degree of caution which will preclude the submission of further demands to the Congress which might ultimately prove a burden on the taxpayers of the Nation."

Cites Payment.

Hines said the total annual Federal benefits paid to or on behalf of veterans of all wars approached $400,000,000, and that the average monthly payment to World War veterans in the year ended last April was $18,500,000.

Commenting on reports that veterans had received more than $1,000,000,000 in cash on their bonus bonds, Hines said he was convinced that as a group they would "exercise thrift, prudence and good judgment in their disbursements."

Although his address had been scheduled for tomorrow, Hines spoke immediately after his arrival today.

Earlier, Aron Kaufman, of New York, attorney for the civil service committee of the D. A. V., declared that the Veterans' Bureau has been a hindrance to the disabled veterans so far as civil service was concerned.

Asks Resolution.

Kaufman asked the convention to adopt a resolution asking the Veterans' Bureau to prohibit the giving of information revealing the percentage of disability of veterans.

In the past, he said, the bureau has reported the percentage to the Civil Service Commission in every case involving veterans' preference.

"If the veteran has a very low percentage, then the Civil Service Commission says that he has not enough of a disability; if the veteran has a high percentage, the Civil Service Commission says he has too much of a disability and cannot work; therefore preference is denied him."
